Gilligan Gets Demo Votes: Lausche Seen Undismayed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Organization Democrats, with tacit labor backing, championed 46-year-old John J. Gilligan today to oppose U.S. Sen. Frank J. Lausche, 72, for a third-term nomination.

Using the state committee's 45-14 endorsement Thursday as a springboard, Gilligan called a news conference in the Neil House to detail his projected campaign to unseat Ohio's record vote-getter.

The sandy-haired former congressman called Lausche's record "contrary to the program and policies of the Democratic party" and county chairmen lined up behind him for the May 7 election campaign.

"We can beat Lausche in the primary," Harry B. Crewson, Athens County chairman, asserted in voicing the general belief of the County Chairmen's Association pledged to Gilligan.

But Lausche, former five-term governor who has successfully bucked both the political and labor "bosses" appeared undismayed by the party executive committee's unprecedented action.

Gilligan's endorsement, he said, "will hurt the cause of the Democratic Party in Ohio more than it will hurt me."

State labor leaders said their organization seldom makes primary endorsements but indications were that they would go all out for Gilligan.

Lausche apparently alluded to labor opposition in referring to forces he said have opposed him since 1943.

Lausche, in a statement issued in Washington, said he was "neither pleased nor distressed" about Gilligan's endorsement.

"The forces which promoted the rejection of my candidacy would have been glad to support me if I had allowed my thinking and voting to be dictated by them. These forces have been unsuccessful in every political contest in which I have been since 1943," he said.

Lausche, however, had always won endorsement before. It was the first time the state party had endorsed anyone challenging an incumbent senator.

Gilligan, a Cincinnati city councilman, was defeated by Rep. Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, in a bid for re-election to Congress in 1966.

The Democratic committee also Thursday named Ohio's other democratic senator, Stephen M. Young, as the party's favorite son presidential candidate. Young has been a constant critic of U.S. Vietnam policies, but said he will support President Johnson for reelection.

Postmasters Cry For More Stamps

NEW YORK (AP) — Send more stamps.

That's the cry of postmasters around the nation, faced with long lines of people trying to adjust to the higher postal rates which went into effect Sunday.

An Associated Press survey showed supplies of the new six-cent first class and 10-cent air mail stamps were low in some centers, particularly outside large cities. Many post offices were completely out of penny stamps sought by people who were left with a stock of the old, five-cent kind.

The Denver post office was completely out of one and two-cent stamps. It had enough six and 10-centers to meet the demand, but had only sheets of stamps, not coils.

Things were even worse in Enid, Okla. The post office was all out of ones, twos, threes and sixes and was waiting for an emergency order to ease the situation.

Postmaster John J. Slattery in Waterbury, Conn., put in an emergency order for 50,000 penny stamps added to his regular order of one million one-centers. The post office began selling half-cent stamps after it ran out of the penny ones.

Stamps had to be rationed in some areas.

A Norton, Kan., man asked for 1,000 one-cent stamps and had to settle for 15 and a Denver man asked for 300 one-centers and got only three. And the postmaster in Warren, Ohio, had to limit six-centers to 300 per customer.

Three other girls in the family were injured and admitted to hospitals. Their father, Richard Feldman, was in deep shock and refused treatment.

Plot To Kill

Pair Backfires

GARDNER, Colo. (AP) — A man pulled a knife and told Mrs. Leda Dietz and her ranch foreman: "I am going to kill you two."

Mrs. Dietz and the foreman, Bill Niehof, 67, wound up in the hospital for treatment of cuts.

The assailant wound up running from the ranch house after the 87-year-old Mrs. Dietz pounded him on the head with a steel poker.

Police, who said they could find no reason for the attack held Julian Cerdas, 54, Gardner on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

British Determined To Quit Asia by 1971

LONDON (AP) — The British government means to stand by its decision to quit Southeast Asia and the Persian Gulf by 1971 despite the protests of Asian members of the commonwealth, high government sources reported today.

The British will try to reassure their partners and allies they intend to remain loyal to all treaty and moral obligations to help them in time of war.

"Just as Australians and New Zealanders and others came to our aid during two world wars," one authority said, "we shall go to their help if the need should ever arise."

British defense planners already are devising arrangements to convince their friends of their sincerity. Two ideas being pondered:

—British air, land and sea forces will participate once or twice a year in exercises with their Commonwealth partners and allies in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO).

—A British amphibious task force may be set up to call regularly at friendly countries in the region.

Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew has been trying to organize a joint descent upon London this weekend by Australian, New Zealand and Malaysian leaders to reinforce his demands for modification of the British decision.

He has threatened that Singapore might pull her estimated 200 million pounds $480 million in sterling deposits out of London and invite the Japanese into his island state to take over

Britain's leading commercial role.

But high British officials insist that no arguments, either from Commonwealth or American leaders, are likely to compel Prime Minister Harold Wilson's cabinet to modify its basic switch from a global to a mainly European political and military role.

"We simply haven't the money for these luxuries any more," one source said.

The source added that it was "inconceivable" that Secretary of State Dean Rusk had told Foreign Secretary George Brown at their conference in Washington Thursday anything that would lead the Cabinet to change its policy.

Senior diplomats said the British are also supporting attempts initiated by Iran to put together a defense alliance of the Persian Gulf oil states including Iran, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and possibly Bahrain.

The Iranians fear that as the British move out, oil-hungry President Gamal Abdel Nasser will move in.

35,000 Marines Wait For Red DMZ Offensive

Third Witness Called by State In Carl Halleck Murder Trial

Area high school government students packed the Pickaway County Common Pleas courtroom today as the second day of testimony got underway in the first degree murder trial of Carl Halleck.

The state has begun its case by presenting three Lawrence County deputy sheriffs as witnesses.

Deputy Robert Henry, the first witness, Thursday described the events leading up to the jailbreak of the Lawrence County Jail on Dec. 2, 1966, during which Ironton Police Chief W. E. Markel was slain and officer Charles Giles was permanently paralyzed by a gunshot wound.

Involved in the jailbreak were Donald Jenkins, and Ronald L.

Browning. Bailey was slain by police officers during the escape.

THE second witness for the prosecution was Deputy Roy Mullins. He was called at 3:25 p.m. in the afternoon after Henry had spent over four hours testifying and under cross examination.

Mullins reconstructed the scene of the slaying as he remembered it. He was in a position to see Chief Markel when the fatal shot was fired. He also testified he saw the weapon that fired the shots and a hand and arm holding the gun at the time.

Deputy Larry Chapman was the third witness to take the stand. Chapman also outlined the events of the jailbreak. He testified that with the exception of Halleck, every person that was in the area of the killing was in his sight at the time the fatal shot was fired.

His testimony placed Halleck

in the radio room where the incident occurred, as has the testimony of the other two witnesses for the prosecution.

The Lawrence County prosecution attorney Dennis Callahan uses a diagram of the jail, sheriff's offices and surrounding area in his examination of the witnesses.

Myers, during cross-examination of the witnesses, uses a scale model of the jail. Over 130 pieces of evidence are expected to be introduced during

5th Regiment Moved North From Da Nang

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Marine force in South Vietnam's two northernmost provinces increased to 35,000 men today as another regiment was moved north to meet the threat of North Vietnamese divisions around the demilitarized zone.

Senior Marine officers said there are indications that the Communist troops will concentrate on the provinces of Quang Tri, which fronts the DMZ, and Thua Thien, just below it, in their expected spring offensive in the north.

The shift of the 3,500-man 5th Marine Regiment from an operating area south of Da Nang gives the Marines three more maneuver battalions—which can cover a wide area and aren't tied down in static defensive positions—in Thua Thien. Only two Marine battalions had been operating in the province generally.

The enlarged Marine force, together with about 12,000 South Vietnamese infantrymen, makes the allied and Communist forces in the DMZ theater of war about equal in infantry manpower, according to intelligence reports.

Marine officers in the know said the 5th Marine Regiment was moved north to help provide increased security for shaky lines of communications, including Highway 1, which links allied supply lines from Da Nang to the DMZ, to extend the area under control of the South Vietnamese government, and to extend Marine strength from Con Thien west to the Laotian border, where Marine forces are now thin.

The North Vietnamese just north of the DMZ fired SAM anti-aircraft missiles Thursday at U.S. eight-engine B52 bombers which strike often in the area to knock out enemy artillery and discourage troop buildups.

The U.S. Command said none of the B52s was hit, and the attack did not divert the bombers from their targets. U.S. Air Force and Marine Phantom fighter-bombers retaliated with raids on two missile launching sites which the U.S. Command said were one and two miles north of the DMZ, but no assessment of damage was announced.

The B52s did not return to the DMZ area today, instead raiding suspected enemy staging areas in the central highlands 60 miles northwest of Saigon near the Cambodian border.

Red Writers Convicted

MOSCOW (AP)—All four defendants in Moscow's literary trial were convicted today of anti-Soviet activities and given sentences ranging from one to seven years imprisonment as demanded by the prosecution, secret police sources reported.

The sentences demanded by the prosecution were:

—Seven years for Yuri Galanskov, 28, who was charged with currency violations as well as anti-Soviet propaganda.

—Five years for Alexander Ginsburg, 31, who has acknowledged compiling a book, published only abroad, on the literary trial of Daniel and Andrei D. Sinyavsky.

—Two years for poet Alexei Dobrovolsky, 29, the only one of the four to plead guilty and testify against the others, and —One year for Miss Vera Lashkova, 21, who acknowledged typing manuscripts for Ginsburg and Galanskov.

Surveyor 7 Starts Tests On Moon

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists maneuvered Surveyor 7's soil testing device into operation today and declared "this will increase our knowledge of the moon vastly."

The success marked a "full mission" for the space craft that softlanded on the moon last Tuesday. Soil testing was a major purpose.

Using a digger scoop that makes trenches in lunar soil, scientists gave the shoebox-sized, soil-testing device a final shove today that placed it on the lunar soil where it must be to make chemical analysis by radiation.

A spokesman at Pasadena's Jet Propulsion Laboratory said the data was being transmitted back to earth but added, "It'll be a week and a half before it can be analyzed."

"This was one of our most important experiments on the spacecraft—it makes it a full mission," the spokesman added. Scientists thought Thursday night they had successfully lowered the soil tester to the surface. But they discovered they had only lowered it part way. It must be flush with the surface to function.

Winter Storm Hits Plains; Northeast Cold

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A massive winter storm patted the midcontinent with snow, sleet and freezing rain today while the Northeast remained locked in a siege of record subzero cold which crept deep into the South.

Thousands of North Carolina families shivered through a night without heat and electricity as a small army of workers labored to repair power lines broken by a three-day ice storm. Repair efforts were frustrated by a forecast of more sleet and freezing rain through tonight.

The death toll from the prolonged hammering by severe weather mounted to 56 across the nation in accidents in snow or on icy pavements, exposure, heart attacks from snow shoveling and heating system failures and fires.

A menacing mixture of snow, sleet and freezing rain tell out of the midcontinent storm extending from northern Texas to the Dakotas and Minnesota. Hazardous driving warnings were posted for an eight-state area from Kansas and Nebraska to Kentucky and Tennessee.

Snow fell in the bitter-cold arctic air sweeping in behind the storm, and sleet and rain glazed the countryside ahead of the new invasion of zero cold. Temperatures fell far below zero in the western Dakotas.

Five inches of snow blanketed Des Moines, Iowa, and 4 inches fell at Omaha. An additional 2 to 4 inches was expected in the region before the storm ends.

The record zero spell gripping the Northeast extended into its fifth day in some sections. The mercury shrank to 27 below at Glens Falls, N.Y., and to -14 at Albany. Massena, in far northern New York, was near the 110-hour mark for consecutive below-zero cold.

New England remained locked in bitter-cold weather, but readings were slightly less severe than a day earlier. Boston Mayor Kevin H. White proclaimed his city in a "critical state" due to the prolonged cold and ordered a 24-hour center set up to handle complaints from families lacking heat.

Order Copters Into Recovery Of Marine Dead

BATTLE MOUNTAIN, Nev. (AP) — Three helicopters have been assigned to recover the bodies of 19 men killed in a Marine transport plane crash on a snowy, windswept mountain crag in desolate northeastern Nevada.

The Defense Department listed the number of victims at 19, reporting that a 20th man left the plane at Denver Wednesday before it began the last and fatal leg of a flight over one of the West's bleakest regions.

The 12th Naval District in San Francisco, supervising rescue operations, ordered the high-altitude copters to Nevada from El Toro Marine Corps base in Southern California.

One reached Fallon, Nev., late Thursday, refueled, then flew to the Battle Mountain airstrip to await dawn before attempting to reach the scene of the crash on 9,978-foot Mt. Tobin.

The Navy said the other two copters were held overnight at Sacramento, Calif., but would fly to Mt. Tobin at daybreak.

If the rocky, precipitous slopes of Mt. Tobin prove too difficult for the helicopters, plans were made to tackle the peak with motorized sleds. Failing at this, rescue mission spokesmen said the assignment would be turned over to ground parties.

Two searchers from the Federal Bureau of Land Management, Wally Swanson and Gene Corbridge, reached the fire-blackened fuselage Thursday afternoon after a perilous ascent.

They quickly located 12 scattered bodies and were sure that all the other Marines were dead in the snow.

An Air Force plane dropped food and sleeping bags and Swanson and Corbridge spent the night on the frigid mountain-side 32 miles southwest of Battle Mountain.

They reported 22 inches of snow on Mt. Tobin, though in some areas near the wreck huge, jagged outcroppings stuck out above the snow.

Swanson and Corbridge, after climbing for six hours, reported the Marine C54 transport "burned to a crisp except the tail."

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Education Association said today its Professional Rights and Responsibilities Commission will conduct a full-scale study of school-community relationships in Lorain Feb. 8-10. The OEA said the study follows defeat of three consecutive school levies by the voters of the Lake Erie port city.

Driver Training Funds Allowed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Department of Education decided Friday that under new legislation that became effective Jan. 1, school boards contracting with approved commercial driving schools to conduct high school driver training courses can receive state reimbursement up to $30 per pupil.

State Supt. Martin Essex said the status of commercial school instruction had been in question because of a new statutory requirement that they "meet course content standards" of the state Board of Education. Commercial schools, he said, are licensed by the Ohio Department of Highway Safety and operate under that department's regulations.

Postmasters Cry For More Stamps

NEW YORK (AP) — Send more stamps.

That's the cry of postmasters around the nation, faced with long lines of people trying to adjust to the higher postal rates which went into effect Sunday.

An Associated Press survey showed supplies of the new six-cent first class and 10-cent air mail stamps were low in some centers, particularly outside large cities. Many post offices were completely out of penny stamps sought by people who were left with a stock of the old, five-cent kind.

The Denver post office was completely out of one and two-cent stamps. It had enough six and 10-centers to meet the demand, but had only sheets of stamps, not coils.

Things were even worse in Enid, Okla. The post office was all out of ones, twos, threes and sixes and was waiting for an emergency order to ease the situation.

Postmaster John J. Slattery in Waterbury, Conn., put in an emergency order for 50,000 penny stamps added to his regular order of one million one-centers. The post office began selling half-cent stamps after it ran out of the penny ones.

Stamps had to be rationed in some areas.

A Norton, Kan., man asked for 1,000 one-cent stamps and had to settle for 15 and a Denver man asked for 300 one-centers and got only three. And the postmaster in Warren, Ohio, had to limit six-centers to 300 per customer.

3 Persons Killed In Pittsburgh Fire

PITTSBURGH, (AP)—Three persons in one family were killed today in a fire that roared through a three-story frame house in Pittsburgh's Beechview section.

Three other girls in the family were injured and admitted to hospitals. Their father, Richard Feldman, was in deep shock and refused treatment.

Plot To Kill Pair Backfires

GARDNER, Colo. (AP) — A man pulled a knife and told Mrs. Leda Dietz and her ranch foreman: "I am going to kill you two."

Mrs. Dietz and the foreman, Bill Niehof, 67, wound up in the hospital for treatment of cuts. The assailant wound up running from the ranch house after the 87-year-old Mrs. Dietz pounded him on the head with a steel poker.

Police, who said they could find no reason for the attack held Julian Cerda, 54, Gardner on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

British Determined To Quit Asia by 1971

LONDON (AP) — The British government means to stand by its decision to quit Southeast Asia and the Persian Gulf by 1971 despite the protests of Asian members of the commonwealth, high government sources reported today.

The British will try to reassure their partners and allies they intend to remain loyal to all treaty and moral obligations to help them in time of war.

"Just as Australians and New Zealanders and others came to our aid during two world wars," one authority said, "we shall go to their help if the need should ever arise."

British defense planners already are devising arrangements to convince their friends of their sincerity. Two ideas being pondered:

—British air, land and sea forces will participate once or twice a year in exercises with their Commonwealth partners and allies in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO).

—A British amphibious task force may be set up to call regularly at friendly countries in the region.

Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew has been trying to organize a joint descent upon London this weekend by Australian, New Zealand and Malaysian leaders to reinforce his demands for modification of the British decision.

He has threatened that Singapore might pull her estimated 200 million pounds $480 million in sterling deposits out of London and invite the Japanese into his island state to take over

Britain's leading commercial role.

But high British officials insist that no arguments, either from Commonwealth or American leaders, are likely to compel Prime Minister Harold Wilson's cabinet to modify its basic switch from a global to a mainly European political and military role.

"We simply haven't the money for these luxuries any more," one source said.

The source added that it was "inconceivable" that Secretary of State Dean Rusk had told Foreign Secretary George Brown at their conference in Washington Thursday anything that would lead the Cabinet to change its policy.

Senior diplomats said the British are also supporting attempts initiated by Iran to put together a defense alliance of the Persian Gulf oil states including Iran, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and possibly Bahrain. The Iranians fear that as the British move out, oil-hungry President Gamal Abdel Nasser will move in.

Newark Police Object of Probe

NEWARK, Ohio (AP)—Citing an increase of crime in the city, the Licking County Grand Jury ordered Thursday an investigation of the "efficiency and operation of the Newark Police Department from top to bottom."

The jury's report, noting that another grand jury a year ago found existence of vice and gambling in the city, said there was evidence that vice, including prostitution, and crime have increased since then.

Mayor James Alexander, who took office this month, said he would call for an investigation at a council meeting next Monday. He said he could not comment on the report until he had read it.

L. L. Hall, 72, who has been police chief more than 20 years, said he would cooperate "in any investigation." He declined further comment.

The grand jury, which also ordered an investigation of the County Welfare Department, also said it found a "general lack" of law enforcement in unincorporated areas of the county and recommended the hiring of additional sheriff's deputies.

Alexander, who testified before the jury, said before he took office that he felt "changes were needed in the police department." Also testifying was City Safety Director James Butler.

Jury foreman John Weaver said there was evidence of "organized crime" in Newark, which has a population of 45,000.

The grand jury requested that if "satisfactory" action has not been taken within six weeks, the jury be reconvened to act upon the situation again.

The city has about 80 policemen, including 24 men who were added to the department recently.

New East Berlin Tower Erected

By HUBERT J. ERB
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — As a prestige project, the Communist government in East Berlin is erecting a broadcast tower which will have a panoramic restaurant at the 800-foot level, overlooking West Berlin.

The tower itself is to be 1,170 feet high. The tower will send out both television and radio signals. It is due to be all the way up in 1969, but the whole project is not due for completion until 1971.

With its reinforced steel and concrete foundation sunk deep into sandy, swampy Berlin soil, the tower represents a considerable engineering feat. It will be second in Europe only to Moscow's newly complete 1,761-foot tower. The Eiffel Tower in Paris stretches 1,056 feet to the top of its television antennas.

For many Germans, the East Berlin tower is an unnecessary addition to the sprawling Berlin skyline. They feel it will overshadow midcity landmarks that escaped destruction in World War II.

These include the Brandenburg Gate just inside East Berlin, the Reichstag just inside West Berlin and the red brick City Hall and the Marienkirche, the city's oldest remaining church, to the flanks of the tower itself.

The first tower ever built in Berlin was erected in 1924-26 and now stands about 450 feet high in what became West Berlin after the war. West Berlin also has a 750-foot tower built after the war for communications with West Germany.

A projected 1,120-foot tower, for the West German ministry that handles broadcast signals, will be located in an outlying section of West Berlin and thus not be much of a direct visual challenge to the midtown East Berlin skyline.

That was primarily a concession to the Western allies who expressed fear a downtown West Berlin tower could endanger air traffic in and out of the isolated city. Work on this is due to begin this year.

The East Berlin tower fits into a Communist drive to make their downtown half of the city into a showcase of modern construction. Building is getting on all around the tower, with emphasis on apartment units, main-access roads and public structures. New construction is dispersed among such painstakingly restored buildings as the National Art Gallery and the Opera house.

The tower seems to back the Communist regime's expressed confidence that it has weathered adverse world opinion about the wall built in 1961 to divide Berlin.

WAITS FOR HEART — James Bower of Ashland, Ohio, a former truck driver, waits with his wife, Ida, and granddaughter Theresa, 2, for a call from a Cleveland hospital that would make him Ohio's first heart transplant patient. Disabled by a series of heart attacks, he has agreed to a transplant by a team of surgeons at St. Vincent Charity hospital.

Doctors Busy With Transplants

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The two survivors among the world's five heart transplant patients both were reported improved today, and Soviet scientists announced they had worked on their transplant techniques by creating a two-headed dog.

Soviet Health Minister Boris V. Petrovsky said, however, he is not satisfied with the safety of human heart transplants and criticized South African heart surgeon Christiaan Barnard.

Other medical news included three new kidney transplants and a teen-age girl rescued from critical condition by use of an artificial heart pump.

Groote Schuur Hospital in Cape Town, South Africa, said Dr. Barnard's second heart transplant patient, Dr. Philip Blaiberg, has improved after a brief setback in which fluid appeared around his new heart. The fluid was drained and no more has appeared, the hospital bulletin said.

In his 11th day after the transplant operation, Blaiberg, 58, a retired dentist, "is once more sitting up in bed, dangling his feet over the side, and the sore throat that has been troubling him has improved considerably," the hospital added.

In Stanford, Calif., Mike Kasperak is in his seventh day with a transplanted heart and doctors appeared so pleased with his progress that a regular bulletin on his condition was omitted Thursday. Spokesmen said, though, that the 54-year-old former steelworker's kidney function had returned to near normal and his liver function continues to improve.

New East Berlin Tower Erected

By HUBERT J. ERB Associated Press Writer
BERLIN (AP)—As a prestige project, the Communist government in East Berlin is erecting a broadcast tower which will have a panoramic restaurant at the 800-foot level, overlooking West Berlin.

The tower itself is to be 1,170 feet high. The tower will send out both television and radio signals. It is due to be all the way up in 1969, but the whole project is not due for completion until 1971.

With its reinforced steel and concrete foundation sunk deep into sandy, swampy Berlin soil, the tower represents a considerable engineering feat. It will be second in Europe only to Moscow's newly complete 1,761-foot tower. The Eiffel Tower in Paris stretches 1,056 feet to the top of its television antennas.

For many Germans, the East Berlin tower is an unnecessary addition to the sprawling Berlin skyline. They feel it will overshadow midcity landmarks that escaped destruction in World War II.

These include the Brandenburg Gate just inside East Berlin, the Reichstag just inside West Berlin and the red brick City Hall and the Marienkirche, the city's oldest remaining church, to the flanks of the tower itself.

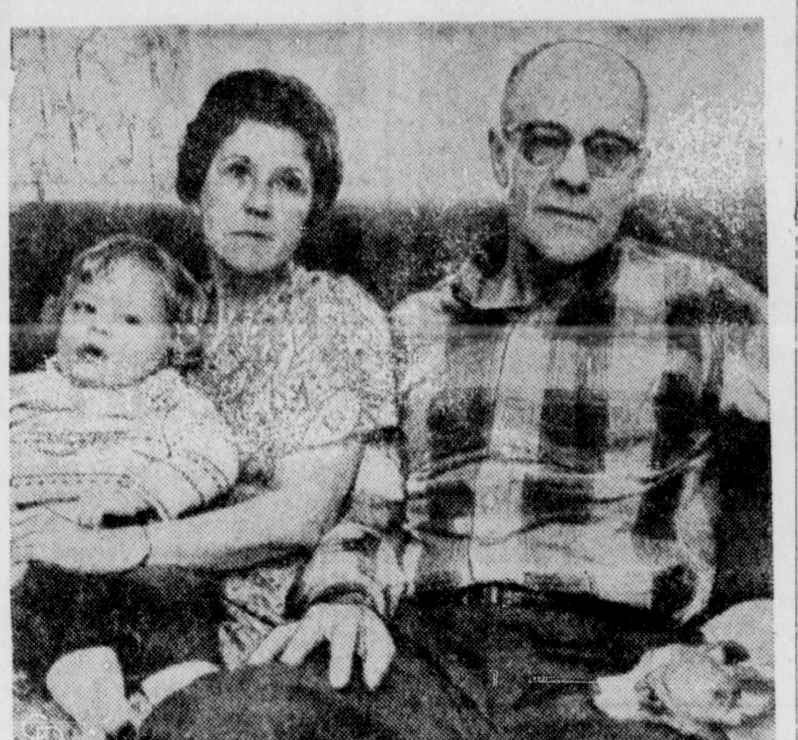

The first tower ever built in Berlin was erected in 1924-26 and now stands about 450 feet high in what became West Berlin after the war. West Berlin also has a 750-foot tower built after the war for communications with West Germany.

A projected 1,120-foot tower, for the West German ministry that handles broadcast signals, will be located in an outlying section of West Berlin and thus not be much of a direct visual challenge to the midtown East Berlin skyline.

That was primarily a concession to the Western allies who expressed fear a downtown West Berlin tower could endanger air traffic in and out of the isolated city. Work on this is due to begin this year.

The East Berlin tower fits into a Communist drive to make their downtown half of the city into a showcase of modern construction. Building is getting on all around the tower, with emphasis on apartment units, main-access roads and public structures. New construction is dispersed among such painstakingly restored buildings as the National Art Gallery and the Opera house.

The tower seems to back the Communist regime's expressed confidence that it has weathered adverse world opinion about the wall built in 1961 to divide Berlin.

WAITS FOR HEART — James Bower of Ashland, Ohio, a former truck driver, waits with his wife, Ida, and granddaughter Theresa, 2, for a call from a Cleveland hospital that would make him Ohio's first heart transplant patient. Disabled by a series of heart attacks, he has agreed to a transplant by a team of surgeons at St. Vincent Charity hospital.

Doctors Busy With Transplants

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The two survivors among the world's five heart transplant patients both were reported improved today, and Soviet scientists announced they had worked on their transplant techniques by creating a two-headed dog.

Soviet Health Minister Boris V. Petrovsky said, however, he is not satisfied with the safety of human heart transplants and criticized South African heart surgeon Christian Barnard.

Other medical news included three new kidney transplants and a teenage girl rescued from a critical condition by use of an artificial heart pump.

Groote Schuur Hospital in Cape Town, South Africa, said Dr. Barnard's second heart transplant patient, Dr. Philip Blaiberg, has improved after a brief setback in which fluid appeared around his new heart. The fluid was drained and no more has appeared, the hospital bulletin said.

In his 11th day after the transplant operation, Blaiberg, 58, a retired dentist, "is once more sitting up in bed, dangling his feet over the side, and the sore throat that has been troubling him has improved considerably" the hospital added.

In Stanford, Calif., Mike Kasperak is in his seventh day with a transplanted heart and doctors appeared so pleased with his progress that a regular bulletin on his condition was omitted Thursday. Spokesmen said, though, that the 54-year-old former steelworker's kidney function had returned to near normal and his liver function continues to improve.

From the Banks of Deercreek

WILLIAMSPORT NEWS

By Ron Beatty — Phone 986-2581

The big news "from the banks of Deercreek" is that it has been cold. One way at the local barbershop reported that the temperature dropped so fast Sunday night that the fish were frozen in their tracks in Deercreek and all you have to do is walk down the creek with an axe, pick out the type and weight fish you want and chop him out. Asked him if he had found any suckers, then began to wonder why the special at Richard's Restaurant has been fish every day this week.

Guess who skipped town when we were all freezing to death? Reverend Williams, that's who! Took off for Haiti of all places. Don't know exactly where that is but think it's around one of those big lakes down South and I know it's warm there. At least he took Mark Clark with him so we'll get the straight of it all when they come back this week. Might even go to church Sunday to find out. Starts at 10:30. He sure nicked a convenient time to turn into a missionary.

Stopped at Leist & Kellers this week for gas. Sat there until my windows frosted. . . went in to find out where the trouble was. . . told me the gas pumps were frozen. I sure didn't go along with that excuse though. I told them to pump me some ice and I would thaw it out on that monstrous furnace they have in their place. In two seconds they had my car filled with gas, every window cleaned, air in my tires, and were shoving me out into the street.

Wonder how that mynah bird at Lingo's Service Station likes this weather. If you haven't seen him, it's worth a trip over. He's the only one I know of in these parts. Talks a blue streak and there's a lot of foolish looks on peoples' faces when they find out a bird is giving them the bird.

Big building going up at Wright's Lumberyard. . . I haven't heard anyone say yet what is going on, but its too big for a house and too small for an astro dome. We're going to need one of those around here if the Mustangs keep packing them in at Westfall. They're on the road this week down to Adena Friday and over to Circleville Saturday. Those boys are good and they appreciate the support they're getting.

Lots of ice skaters out this week, but we need more hills over here for the sleigh riders. Might get Council to look into that.

Wonder how many people would like to have Mr. McDill's job this week? He's right on the ball helping the kids across Route 22 and deserves a big thanks from everybody.

Haven't noticed any visitors in town this week I saw a car last summer parked up town with Kentucky license plates, but guess you can wander afar in the summer. Someone said there was a car from Arizona here last year but I would have to see that to believe it.

Carl Long says he has pet rabbits in the yard and goes out every half hour to thaw their water out. . . Says he's going to work out a scheme with a sun dial involving solar power. . . sounds a little hare-brained, Carl.

NFO Boycott Follows USDA Idea

By OVID A. MARTIN
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In asking its members to withhold grains from the market place to gain higher prices the National Farmers Organization is following Johnson administration practice.

The Agriculture Department already is holding government-controlled grain stocks off markets in a bid to boost farmers' prices.

And the NFO action in other ways parallels administration farm marketing and production policies, which call for reducing production when prices are low.

The NFO announced the grain withholding action Thursday. President Oren Lee Staley said in Corning, Iowa, the "no price, no production" campaign would be followed later with withholding of meat, milk and other commodities.

The NFO has conducted six withholding actions previously, the latest last March focusing on milk prices.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman declined comment Thursday on the NFO action. But in urging last year that grain be withheld from markets he appeared in effect to be giving prior approval to such moves.

"Marketing is something farmers must do largely by themselves and through their farm organizations in cooperatives," he said at that time.

He confined his comments to newsmen Thursday to saying commercial markets had dipped too low as the result of record large crops in 1967.

The Agriculture Department maintains a weapon which is available to farmers for delaying crop sales. It is a price support loan program under which growers may hold grains off the market and obtain substantial loans to help them carry on until final disposition of the crops is decided on.

When it became apparent late last summer that 1967 crops would reach record highs and that prices would weaken, Freeman urged growers to hold crops off markets by putting them under government support loans. Many farmers have.

The government's withholding action is not being limited to grains. Freeman also has been asking farmers to withhold—in a sense—cattle, hogs, poultry and eggs.

All these recommendations are designed to reduce market supplies and improve farm prices. But his proposed withholding action would take place before the commodities are produced rather than, as in the case of the present action by the NFO, holding back products already produced.

As for grains, Freeman has announced programs that would reduce wheat planted for harvest in 1968 to about 13 per cent below last year's acreage. He also wants a smaller planting of feed grains.

Protesters Try To Disrupt Rusk Foreign Policy Talk

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — With violence erupting between antiwar pickets and police outside, Secretary of State Dean Rusk spoke of an elusive peace in a foreign policy speech Thursday night.

Cursing, bottle-throwing, brick-hurling pickets were massed across the street more than an hour before Rusk's appearance before 1,500 members of the Commonwealth Club and World Affairs Council.

Rusk was whisked inside without seeing the 500 or so demonstrators who were swept away by a wedge of police officers holding night sticks in front of them. Fifty were arrested, many carried or dragged to patrol wagons. Police used an eye-smarting, gagging spray chemical to disperse the disorderly group, which continued to reform in smaller units for several hours.

Some officers were hit by missiles from the crowd and one woman was struck on the head by a brick. Cars and the hotel were splattered with bags of red paint.

Helmets police were bantering with each other until several bottles shattered against the hotel entrance and some cars, including a police cruiser. Then came the order to clear the area.

Patrol wagons moved in, police reinforcements fell into line and the demonstrators were sent reeling down the block.

some running down a steep hill, others seeking refuge in nearby Grace Cathedral.

Rusk delivered an informal speech on U.S. policy as the demonstrators shrieked and milled about outside.

His speech centered on Vietnam and the Middle East, but also touched on the balance of payments problem, the President's tax program, free speech and 1967 accomplishments.

"It's too late in history to pursue a policy based on total hostility across the board," Rusk declared. He said, "There will be no lessons drawn from World War III. There will not be enough left. Carelessness can be fatal."

"Building of the peace must be our principal preoccupation," he continued, "and it is the overriding test for everything we do in our relations with other nations."

Draft Laws Explained

EDITOR'S NOTE: In an effort to create a greater public understanding of the laws and regulations governing the induction of personnel into the Armed Forces the Selective Service System has prepared a series of pertinent questions and corresponding responses concerning provisions of the draft law. Here is another of the series.

Q. What is the first historical record of conscription of manpower for military service?

A. According to the Bible, Numbers—1, 2, 3, the following, is related: "Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls, from 20 years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel, thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies." Thus, with divine sanction, a military enumeration was conducted by a law-giver no less than Moses himself, and Israel thereby raised a conscript army numbering 603,550.

Q. How can I find out how a friend of mine in the same Local Board was classified at a meeting last week?

A. The Military Selective Service Act provides that there shall be posted in a conspicuous place at each Local Board a list setting forth the names and classifications of those persons who have been classified by such Local Board.

Q. When a registrant or other person is given a certain number of days to furnish information or perform some other

Protesters Try To Disrupt Rusk Foreign Policy Talk

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — With violence erupting between antiwar pickets and police outside, Secretary of State Dean Rusk spoke of an elusive peace in a foreign policy speech Thursday night.

Cursing, bottle-throwing, brick-hurling pickets were massed across the street more than an hour before Rusk's appearance before 1,500 members of the Commonwealth Club and World Affairs Council.

Rusk was whisked inside without seeing the 500 or so demonstrators who were swept away by a wedge of police officers holding night sticks in front of them. Fifty were arrested, many carried or dragged to patrol wagons. Police used an eye-smarting, gagging spray chemical to disperse the disorderly group, which continued to reform in smaller units for several hours.

Some officers were hit by missiles from the crowd and one woman was struck on the head by a brick. Cars and the hotel were splattered with bags of red paint.

Helmeted police were bantering with each other until several bottles shattered against the hotel entrance and some cars, including a police cruiser. Then came the order to clear the area.

Patrol wagons moved in, police reinforcements fell into line and the demonstrators were sent reeling down the block.

some running down a steep hill, others seeking refuge in nearby Grace Cathedral.

Rusk delivered an informal speech on U.S. policy as the demonstrators shrieked and milled about outside.

His speech centered on Vietnam and the Middle East, but also touched on the balance of payments problem, the President's tax program, free speech and 1967 accomplishments.

"It's too late in history to pursue a policy based on total hostility across the board," Rusk declared. He said, "There will be no lessons drawn from World War III. There will not be enough left. Carelessness can be fatal."

"Building of the peace must be our principal preoccupation," he continued, "and it is the overriding test for everything we do in our relations with other nations."

Draft Laws Explained

EDITOR'S NOTE: In an effort to create a greater public understanding of the laws and regulations governing the induction of personnel into the Armed Forces the Selective Service System has prepared a series of pertinent questions and corresponding responses concerning provisions of the draft law Here is another of the series.

Q. What is the first historical record of conscription of manpower for military service?

A. According to the Bible, Numbers—1: 2, 3, the following is related: "Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their polls, from 20 years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel, thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies." Thus, with divine sanction, a military enumeration was conducted by a law-giver no less than Moses himself, and Israel thereby raised a conscript army numbering 603,550.

Q. How can I find out how a friend of mine in the same Local Board was classified at a meeting last week?

A. The Military Selective Service Act provides that there shall be posted in a conspicuous place at each Local Board a list setting forth the names and classifications of those persons who have been classified by such Local Board.

Q. When a registrant or other person is given a certain number of days to furnish information or perform some other

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Growing demand, a miners' strike, speculation and the inability to find substitutes continue to push up the price of silver. This week it sold for more than $2.10 an ounce, 91 cents higher than last May.

Among those hurt the most by this 61 per cent increase are photographic film manufacturers and eventually the users of their product, who must pay higher prices. Film makers are the largest industrial users of the metal, which helps make their product light sensitive.

Among the chief beneficiaries are owners of paper currency on which is printed the words "silver certificate." These bills, in $1, $5 and $10 denominations are redeemable in silver priced at only $1.293 an ounce.

As a result, currency brokers have been scouring the country for these certificates, which no longer will be redeemable in silver after June 24. Brokers this week were paying as much as $15.50 for a $10 bill.

Estimates vary, but something like $300 million of silver certificates still are outstanding, meaning their value with premium added is about $450 million. But, if not redeemed within the next five months or so they are worth face value only.

The resulting scramble finds currency dealers opening neighborhood offices, advertising nationally, accepting bills by mail. In turn, they take the bills to the U.S. Assay Office, buy silver at $1.293 an ounce and resell it at $2.10.

This would seem to give the dealers a profit of more than 80 cents, but the 55 per cent premium reduces this to a still worthwhile nine or 10 cents profit per dollar.

The incredible series of factors that led to the state of affairs began many years ago when the government wished to assure the world that its currency was worth its weight in silver.

In 1961 the government knew that growing industrial demand for silver would cause shortages, because nature limits domestic silver production to about 45 million ounces a year. It began replacing silver certificates with Federal Reserve notes, which cannot be redeemed for metal of any kind.

As industrial demand increased, the price of silver rose from a base of about 90 cents. By mid-1963 it reached $1.293 an ounce, where it was frozen by government in order to protect coinage from being melted.

The Treasury made sure this price was not exceeded by agreeing to supply silver users from its own supplies. If the price had a tendency to rise it couldn't go far; the government made sure of that.

As Treasury stocks of silver dwindled, silverless coins were introduced in 1965. Melting was specifically forbidden. Bans on silver exports were instituted. All these measures were aimed at maintaining an adequate supply.

Last July, with mounds of silverless coins available, the Treasury abandoned its fixed price. Soon the law of supply and demand began boosting prices. Speculators and hoarders pushed it up even more.

At the same time another factor came on the scene: copper miners went on strike. Since silver is a byproduct of copper mining, silver production has been nearly halted since last summer, thus worsening the shortage.

All during this time of soaring demand and price, chemical companies and film makers have been trying to find substitutes. But, in film making at least, the search has been mostly in vain.

As a result, the premiums offered on silver certificates have risen, even though erratically, from about 10 per cent early last summer to more than 50 per cent at New York this week.

Musketeers of Doom

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

This column should perhaps leave financial predictions to the wizards of the market pages, but it is disturbed by the judgments of some of its most respected friends that the Administration's program for saving the dollar is a too-little-and-too-late business. The reason for worry is that the judgmental critics were right all along in predicting the downfall of the British pound, and now see the dollar following along in a couple of years. When George Schwartz, the London Sunday Times financial writer, concurs with Clarence Streit, the crusader for a true political union of the Atlantic nations, and when Eliot Janeway, the hard-boiled analyst who has just written "The Economics of Crisis," agrees with both of them that trouble can't be sidestepped by such things as cutting down on foreign travel allowances (England tried it for years), then it is time to stop, look and listen.

Clarence Streit is the most willing prophet among the three musketeers of doom. Since 1963 he has been forecasting the downfall of the pound and the dollar (in that order) if something weren't done to bring about a more perfect union of the western world. Mr. Streit has all along insisted that the Communists expect to win without a military fight, merely by waiting for a monetary crash and depression to undermine within. Now Clarence Streit intends victories from says, "I stick my neck out again, as regards 1968, despite the prevailing forecasts of the economists." Moscow, he reminds us, has not been as blatant as de Gaulle in its attack on the dollar. But "by rattling from time to time its armed power, it has kept the U. S. giving Foreign Aid that weakens the dollar," and "by backing North Vietnam and Egypt, it weakens the dollar still more, and adds to Atlantic disunion and distrust of the U. S."

All this, says Streit, has made a monetary crash possible that would see the dollar following the pound within a year. Devaluation of the dollar would hit particularly hard at Japan, which has had almost ninety per cent of its reserves in dollars, and a number of Latin American nations including Mexico, Brazil, and Argentina, which have had an eighty per cent dollar reserve.

Janeway thinks that LBJ's "dollar gamble amounts to a bet on the bludgeon." The Administration's idea is to frighten Europe into taking dollars without calling for gold.

When de Gaulle sees his big summer take from U.S. tourists drying up, so the theory runs, he'll come to heel along with most of the European central banks. But Janeway doubts that the private holders of the "Euro-dollar" will cooperate. A new cycle of world-wide contraction is now in motion.

George Schwartz, the London Sunday Times financial man, was one of the participants in the Mont Pelerin Society economic policy discussions held last September in Vichy, France. As an observer in Vichy I was particularly taken with his sweet way of phrasing the most gloomy prognostications. He points out that the U.S. shows no desire to learn from what has happened in Britain, and is therefore doomed to repeat all of the Labor government's mistakes. The British have operated on the theory that anything can be afforded at home, since you pay for it in paper that is "owed to yourselves." And they have tried to stave off external foreign travel. (Few British economists made it to the 1966 Mont Pelerin economic sessions in Tokyo, but a bigger contingent including Mr. Schwartz managed to scrounge up enough credit in France to get to Vichy a year later.) The dodges didn't work, and the pound collapsed for the far more fundamental reason that British industry had become inefficient at home, thus making it difficult to export.

The dollar, so the three musketeers of doom that have been mentioned in this column agree in thinking, will hit the tobyogan because of a combination of domestic and foreign reasons. A two or three billion dollar annual deficit on our external balance of payments could be digested, but a thirty billion dollar domestic budget deficit must cause every dollar holder abroad to distrust our financial sanity. We may "owe it to ourselves," but why should the private holder of the "Euro-dollar" be caught in the switches when gold is an available alternative?

The agent took her first to 20th Century-Fox where talent executives were enough impressed to order a personality test on film—in which the hopeful answers questions on camera to determine whether the personality comes across. After a couple of readings in dramatic scenes Lara was signed Dec. 12, 1966 to a term contract starting at $175 a week.

Her schooling began immediately. "It's an intensive schedule from 10 to 5 every day five days a week," she explained. "And you must attend everything. If you have too many unexcused absences your salary is reduced."

"But it doesn't make sense not to attend. We're getting the best schooling a performer could find in Hollywood and we're paid for it. I couldn't possibly afford the kind of classes I get at the studio."

Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler plans to get together with key members of Congress soon after it reconvenes next Monday to work out a possible tax to discourage travel abroad.

A head tax or a tax on the number of days a person remains abroad are considered major possibilities.

But Congress will have the last word and the outcome at this point is uncertain.

Speaking of Your Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I am writing to learn what damage can be done to a high school boy who is strenuously dieting for wrestling. My son is a senior and has dieted for two years. Our doctor says he is in excellent condition and insisted that he should lose no more than five pounds.

Our son has reduced from 124 pounds to 112 pounds and is now hoping to go to 103 pounds. Even though he has not suffered any defects there is some controversy among the doctors, coaches and school personnel on this subject. You have my permission to print this letter and your reply.

MRS. C. T. Ohio
Dear Mrs. T.: Thank you for permitting me to reprint your letter, only part of which I have used to conserve space.

You son's continued good health is the best indication that his strenuous dieting has not affected him adversely. Yet I do not see the wisdom in continuing this weight-reducing program against the advice of your doctor.

It may well be that your son's height permits him to reduce to 103 pounds. If this were so, your doctor would certainly have allowed him to do so simply by referring to the normal charts that relate to age, height and weight.

I do not understand why there should be controversy in your community among the doctors, coaches and school personnel.

The problem is not an unusual one and there shouldn't be any diversity of opinion. Coaches always work hand-in-hand with doctors to be sure that any sport enhances health rather than injures it.

You can be certain that your son's wrestling accomplishment is not nearly as important to the coach as is his student's health. A simple consultation with the coach and your doctor would immediately clarify the issues for you rather than convert them into a community controversy.

In answer to another unprinted part of your letter let me say that there is little or no chance that such rigid dieting will affect his growth, his heart, or damage his future health. If there were any possibility that this might occur, your doctor would have emphatically stepped in and said so to your son and to his coach.

Sports are a valuable addition

The World Today

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong have good reason to kick themselves for dawdling. At the same time Ho Chi Minh, the chief dawdler, may have done communism one of its greatest favors.

The dawdling was in failing to try to take over South Vietnam faster. The favor was in making Americans, after their experience in this war, perhaps a little more reluctant to get into another one like it.

It's impossible at this time to draw a sharp distinction, if any, between the Viet Cong and Communist North Vietnam. It can be assumed, until history proves otherwise, that Ho Chi Minh's North Vietnamese were the directing force and chief helper in men and supplies for the Viet Cong.

When the Viet Cong, in the late 1950s, began their guerrilla war to overthrow President Ngo Dinh Diem's government of South Vietnam, they operated on a small scale compared with the forces in the field now.

The shadow of the United States, which had been backing Diem since 1954, lay across the country. But it was hardly a frightening shadow then. It had been helping Diem but there was no certainty this country would get into war for him.

Even by 1960 the United States had only 785 men there, not as a fighting force but as assistants, consultants and trainers. The Viet Cong increased in numbers and success as the years passed.

By the end of 1964 this country had 18,000 men in Vietnam but by then the Saigon government was in danger. Diem had proved no match by himself for the Viet Cong which had the country throttled.

Yet, although in all the years since 1954 the United States had stayed out of the fighting, it was something the Viet Cong and North Vietnam had to think about. What would the Americans do if the Viet Cong were on the verge of taking over the country?

Recent history was not a perfect guide. In the years after World War II the United States had helped Chiang Kai-shek and his nationalists on mainland China but stood aside when the Chinese Communists crushed him finally and took over the mainland.

But the United States had done exactly the opposite when, after withdrawing from South Korea, the North Korean Reds invaded it in 1950. Immediately the United States plunged back in and was involved for years in a war that drove the North Koreans back to where they had started.

So the Viet Cong and North Vietnam would only guess what this country might do if South Vietnam were near total seizure by the Reds. Apparently they assumed the United States would not get involved. It was a wrong guess.

They proceeded slowly instead of using their utmost effort to take over South Vietnam fast before the United States, which had been building up its forces on a tiny scale, could make up its mind about intervening.

Once the Communists had taken control, this country might very well have decided it was too late to move in.

Although this country now seems determined to see the war to an end, it has been a costly, bloody, drawn out struggle, thanks to the dogged determination of Ho Chi Minh, and the end is not in sight.

This country, split over the war, has been forced into bitter soul-searching. President Johnson has not only lost some political power but has been abused more intensely than any president in this century.

This experience—the cost of the war in lives and money, the division of thinking and unhappiness at home—may make the United States a lot more reluctant to get involved in the future for the sake of a small nation in Asia or elsewhere threatened by Communist seizure.

According to Boyle

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — "I reached a low point in my life, but I've come back from it," said Col. John H. Glenn Jr.

Glenn, the first American astronaut to orbit the earth, makes his debut as a television star tonight in "Great Explorations," a new series on NBC-TV.

On the program Glenn will follow the route taken by journalist Henry Morton Stanley in his historic search for missionary David Livingston in Africa late in the last century.

Recalling his own historic orbital flight over the same territory in 1962, the colonel remarked:

"It took me 3 minutes and 20 seconds to cover the route it took Stanley 8½ months. I was traveling five miles a second. A lot of days Stanley didn't make that much a day."

No American of his generation ever received greater accolade than greeted Glenn after he piloted the Mercury Friendship 7 spacecraft on its successful three-orbit mission around the earth on Feb. 20, 1962. Honors were showered on him from all parts of the country. He received a hero's welcome wherever he went.

But personal disaster struck in 1964 when, after resigning from the Marine Corps, he announced plans to enter politics and seek election as U.S. senator from Ohio. A bathroom fall left him with an ear injury that forced him to abandon his political campaign.

"That certainly wasn't a vintage year for me," Glenn said during a recent luncheon interview. "I was out of everything for almost a year, and I guess I was lucky just to be among the living."

Added to worry over his low physical recuperation were the biggest financial troubles of his lifetime. The cancellation of his senatorial campaign left him and his backers racing thousands of dollars in unpaid bills. He could have ducked them but, characteristically, decided to shoulder them all himself.

"I was determined to pay off all my political debts, and I did," he said. "It took me a year and a half to do it, and 23½ years of my Marine Corps savings went down the drain. It wasn't a huge sum, but it seemed a big amount to me."

Today he is completely recovered, both physically and financially. He serves as a consultant on space matters for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and is president of Royal Crown Cola International, Ltd. He has traveled in 33 countries in the last two years.

Still boyish looking at 46, Glenn weighs 178 pounds, only five more than he did when he made his orbital flights. Now as then, he runs at least two miles every day when he is at home.

"I like to keep in shape," he said. "If I don't take exercise, I feel dull and lousy."

"Life is good again for me now—after that low point, I enjoy everything."

"All our debts are paid, my wife Annie's health is good, and our two kids are in school. The whole family is fine."

New Talent School

By BOB THOMAS

AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "They don't teach you to be a starlet. They teach you to be a star, and that's what I want to be."

That is the ambition of Lara Lindsay, and she is being helped toward her goal by the most intensive star-building program ever instituted in Hollywood—the 20th Century-Fox school for new talent.

For 10 years the film industry, out of economic necessity, ignored the grooming of new stars. Studios felt they could no longer employ and train dozens of young hopefuls, a few of whom might turn into stellar attractions. The result: as the established stars died or faded away, there were few new ones to take their places. Box-office stars became fewer in number and higher in cost.

With its return to prosperity, 20th Century-Fox realized the urgent need to replenish the talent pool. The Zanucks, father and son, established a program under the supervision of talent executives Owen McLean and Jack Bauer. Today a score of young hopefuls are enrolled in the compulsory curriculum.

Universal also has a talent school, but attendance is voluntary.

Lara Lindsay is one of the most promising Fox students. The name sounds a bit artificial and it is. She was born Gladys Jacobs in Chicago, started skating at an early age and ended up in the Icecapades and other shows. She married an interior designer became mother of a son now 4. When the marriage started to break up she capitalized on her blue-eyed, burn-haired beauty by doing commercials on television in Tucson, Ariz. Her pay: $15 per commercial.

Then it happened—one of those chance events upon which acting careers are built. The Paramount Western "El Dorado" came to Tucson and Lara got a job standing in for Charlene Holt. Coworkers encouraged her to come to Hollywood. She did.

Lara went through the heart-breaking routine of trying to interest an agent in presenting her to the studios. She finally obtained one—also a new name—Lara from "Dr. Zhivago" Lindsay from a brother—and a rearranged set of teeth.

The agent took her first to 20th Century-Fox where talent executives were enough impressed to order a personality test on film—in which the hopeful answers questions on camera to determine whether the personality comes across. After a couple of readings in dramatic scenes Lara was signed Dec. 12, 1966 to a term contract starting at $175 a week.

NEW YORK (AP) — Growing demand, a miners' strike, speculation and the inability to find substitutes continue to push up the price of silver. This week it sold for more than $2.10 an ounce, 91 cents higher than last May.

Among those hurt the most by this 61 per cent increase are photographic film manufacturers and eventually the users of their product, who must pay higher prices. Film makers are the largest industrial users of the metal, which helps make their product light sensitive.

Among the chief beneficiaries are owners of paper currency on which is printed the words "silver certificate." These bills, in $1, $5 and $10 denominations are redeemable in silver priced at only $1.293 an ounce.

As a result, currency brokers have been scouring the country for these certificates, which no longer will be redeemable in silver after June 24. Brokers this week were paying as much as $15.50 for a $10 bill.

Estimates vary, but something like $300 million of silver certificates still are outstanding, meaning their value with premium added is about $450 million. But, if not redeemed within the next five months or so they are worth face value only.

The resulting scramble finds currency dealers opening neighborhood offices, advertising nationally, accepting bills by mail. In turn, they take the bills to the U.S. Assay Office, buy silver at $1.293 an ounce and resell it at $2.10.

This would seem to give the dealers a profit of more than 80 cents, but the 55 per cent premium reduces this to a still worthwhile nine or 10 cents profit per dollar.

The incredible series of factors that led to the state of affairs began many years ago when the government wished to assure the world that its currency was worth its weight in silver.

In 1961 the government knew that growing industrial demand for silver would cause shortages, because nature limits domestic silver production to about 45 million ounces a year. It began replacing silver certificates with Federal Reserve notes, which cannot be redeemed for metal of any kind.

As industrial demand increased, the price of silver rose from a base of about 90 cents. By mid-1963 it reached $1.293 an ounce, where it was frozen by government in order to protect coinage from being melted.

The Treasury made sure this price was not exceeded by agreeing to supply silver users from its own supplies. If the price had a tendency to rise it couldn't go far; the government made sure of that.

As Treasury stocks of silver dwindled, silverless coins were introduced in 1965. Melting was specifically forbidden. Bans on silver exports were instituted. All these measures were aimed at maintaining an adequate supply.

Last July, with mounds of silverless coins available, the Treasury abandoned its fixed price. Soon the law of supply and demand began boosting prices. Speculators and hoarders pushed it up even more.

At the same time another factor came on the scene: copper miners went on strike. Since silver is a byproduct of copper mining, silver production has been nearly halted since last summer, thus worsening the shortage.

All during this time of soaring demand and price, chemical companies and film makers have been trying to find substitutes. But, in film making at least, the search has been mostly in vain.

As a result, the premiums offered on silver certificates have risen, even though erratically, from about 10 per cent early last summer to more than 50 per cent at New York this week.

Speaking of Your Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I am writing to learn what damage can be done to a high school boy who is strenuously dieting for wrestling. My son is a senior and has dieted for two years. Our doctor says he is in excellent condition and insisted that he should lose no more than five pounds.

Our son has reduced from 124 pounds to 112 pounds and is now hoping to go to 103 pounds. Even though he has not suffered any defects there is some controversy among the doctors, coaches and school personnel on this subject. You have my permission to print this letter and your reply.

MRS. C. T. Ohio
Dear Mrs. T.: Thank you for permitting me to reprint your letter, only part of which I have used to conserve space.

You son's continued good healthy is the best indication that his strenuous dieting has not affected him adversely. Yet I do not see the wisdom in continuing this weight-reducing program against the advice of your doctor.

It may well be that your son's height permits him to reduce to 103 pounds. If this were so, your doctor would certainly have allowed him to do so simply by referring to the normal charts that relate to age, height and weight.

I do not understand why there should be controversy in your community among the doctors, coaches and school personnel.

The problem is not an unusual one and there shouldn't be any diversity of opinion. Coaches always work hand-in-hand with doctors to be sure that any sport enhances health rather than injures it.

You can be certain that your son's wrestling accomplishment is not nearly as important to the coach as is his student's health. A simple consultation between the coach and your doctor would immediately clarify the issues for you rather than convert them into a community controversy.

In answer to another unprinted part of your letter let me say that there is little or no chance that such rigid dieting will affect his growth, his heart, or damage his future health. If there were any possibility that this might occur, your doctor would have emphatically stepped in and said so to your son and to his coach.

Sports are a valuable addition to the physical and emotional health of any growing person. There can be no equivocation as to whether it is beneficial or a hazard. When there is the slightest danger both the coach and the school personnel are the very first to seek the advice of the school doctor or the personal physician of the student.

Your community might benefit from an evening's forum during which questions can be directed to a panel of physicians, coaches and students. I include students because they have a special kind of wisdom about their own problems.

Hand injuries should not be overlooked. Permanent disability can result from neglect.

The World Today

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong have good reason to kick themselves for dawdling. At the same time Ho Chi Minh, the chief dawdler, may have done communism one of its greatest favors.

The dawdling was in failing to try to take over South Vietnam faster. The favor was in making Americans, after their experience in this war, perhaps a little more reluctant to get into another one like it.

It's impossible at this time to draw a sharp distinction, if any, between the Viet Cong and Communist North Vietnam. It can be assumed, until history proves otherwise, that Ho Chi Minh's North Vietnamese were the directing force and chief helper in men and supplies for the Viet Cong.

When the Viet Cong, in the late 1950s, began their guerrilla war to overthrow President Ngo Dinh Diem's government of South Vietnam, they operated on a small scale compared with the forces in the field now.

The shadow of the United States, which had been backing Diem since 1954, lay across the country. But it was hardly a frightening shadow then. It had been helping Diem but there was no certainty this country would get into war for him.

Even by 1960 the United States had only 785 men there, not as a fighting force but as assistants, consultants and trainers. The Viet Cong increased in numbers and success as the years passed.

By the end of 1964 this country had 18,000 men in Vietnam but by then the Saigon government was in danger. Diem had proved no match by himself for the Viet Cong which had the country throttled.

Yet, although in all the years since 1954 the United States had stayed out of the fighting, it was something the Viet Cong and North Vietnam had to think about. What would the Americans do if the Viet Cong were on the verge of taking over the country?

Recent history was not a perfect guide. In the years after World War II the United States had helped Chiang Kai-shek and his nationalists on mainland China but stood aside when the Chinese Communists crushed him finally and took over the mainland.

But the United States had done exactly the opposite when, after withdrawing from South Korea, the North Korean Reds invaded it in 1950. Immediately the United States plunged back in and was involved for years in a war that drove the North Koreans back to where they had started.

So the Viet Cong and North Vietnam would only guess what this country might do if South Vietnam were near total seizure by the Reds. Apparently they assumed the United States would not get involved. It was a wrong guess.

They proceeded slowly instead of using their utmost effort to take over South Vietnam fast before the United States, which had been building up its forces on a tiny scale, could make up its mind about intervening.

Once the Communists had taken control, this country might very well have decided it was too late to move in.

Although this country now seems determined to see the war to an end, it has been a costly, bloody, drawn out struggle, thanks to the dogged determination of Ho Chi Minh, and the end is not in sight.

This country, split over the war, has been forced into bitter soul-searching. President Johnson has not only lost some political power but has been abused more intensely than any president in this century.

This experience—the cost of the war in lives and money, the division of thinking and unhappiness at home—may make the United States a lot more reluctant to get involved in the future for the sake of a small nation in Asia or elsewhere threatened by Communist seizure.

NEW YORK (AP) — "I reached a low point in my life, but I've come back from it," said Col. John H. Glenn Jr.

Glenn, the first American astronaut to orbit the earth, makes his debut as a television star tonight in "Great Explorations," a new series on NBC-TV.

On the program Glenn will follow the route taken by journalist Henry Morton Stanley in his historic search for missionary David Livingston in Africa late in the last century.

Recalling his own historic orbital flight over the same territory in 1962, the colonel remarked:

"It took me 3 minutes and 20 seconds to cover the route it took Stanley 8½ months. I was traveling five miles a second. A lot of days Stanley didn't make that much a day."

No American of his generation ever received greater accolade than greeted Glenn after he piloted the Mercury Friendship 7 spacecraft on its successful three-orbit mission around the earth on Feb. 20, 1962. Honors were showered on him from all parts of the country. He received a hero's welcome wherever he went.

But personal disaster struck in 1964 when, after resigning from the Marine Corps, he announced plans to enter politics and seek election as U.S. senator from Ohio. A bathroom fall left him with an ear injury that forced him to abandon his political campaign.

"That certainly wasn't a vintage year for me," Glenn said during a recent luncheon interview. "I was out of everything for almost a year, and I guess I was lucky just to be among the living."

Added to worry over his low physical recuperation were the biggest financial troubles of his lifetime. The cancellation of his senatorial campaign left him and his backers racing thousands of dollars in unpaid bills. He could have ducked them but, characteristically, decided to shoulder them all himself.

"I was determined to pay off all my political debts, and I did," he said. "It took me a year and a half to do it, and 33½ years of my Marine Corps savings went down the drain. It wasn't a huge sum, but it seemed a big amount to me."

Today he is completely recovered, both physically and financially. He serves as a consultant on space matters for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and is president of Royal Crown Cola International, Ltd. He has traveled in 33 countries in the last two years.

Still boyish looking at 46, Glenn weighs 178 pounds, only five more than he did when he made his orbital flights. Now as then, he runs at least two miles every day when he is at home.

"I like to keep in shape," he said. "If I don't take exercise, I feel dull and lousy."

"Life is good again for me now—after that low point. I enjoy everything."

"All our debts are paid, my wife Annie's health is good, and our two kids are in school. The whole family is fine."

New Talent School

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "They don't teach you to be a starlet. They teach you to be a star, and that's what I want to be."

That is the ambition of Lara Lindsay, and she is being helped toward her goal by the most intensive star-building program ever instituted in Hollywood—the 20th Century-Fox school for new talent.

For 10 years the film industry, out of economic necessity, ignored the grooming of new stars. Studios felt they could no longer employ and train dozens of young hopefuls, a few of whom might turn into stellar attractions. The result: as the established stars died or faded away, there were few new ones to take their places. Box-office stars became fewer in number and higher in cost.

With its return to prosperity, 20th Century-Fox realized the urgent need to replenish the talent pool. The Zanucks, father and son, established a program under the supervision of talent executives Owen McLean and Jack Bauer. Today a score of young hopefuls are enrolled in the compulsory curriculum.

Universal also has a talent school, but attendance is voluntary.

Lara Lindsay is one of the most promising Fox students. The name sounds a bit artificial and it is. She was born Gladys Jacobs in Chicago, started skating at an early age and ended up in the Icecapades and other shows. She married an interior designer became mother of a son now 4. When the marriage started to break up she capitalized on her blue-eyed auburn-haired beauty by doing commercials on television in Tucson, Ariz. Her pay: $15 per commercial.

Then it happened—one of those chance events upon which acting careers are built. The Paramount Western "El Dorado" came to Tucson and Lara got a job standing in for Charlene Holt. Coworkers encouraged her to come to Hollywood. She did.

Lara went through the heart-breaking routine of trying to interest an agent in presenting her to the studios. She finally obtained one—also a new name—Lara from "Dr. Zhivago" Lindsay from a brother—and a rearranged set of teeth.

The agent took her first to 20th Century-Fox where talent executives were enough impressed to order a personality test on film—in which the hopeful answers questions on camera to determine whether the personality comes across. After a couple of readings in dramatic scenes Lara was signed Dec. 12, 1966 to a term contract starting at $175 a week.

Her schooling began immediately.

"It's an intensive schedule from 10 to 5 every day five days a week," she explained. "And you must attend everything. If you have too many unexcused absences your salary is reduced."

"But it doesn't make sense not to attend. We're getting the best schooling a performer could find in Hollywood and we're paid for it. I couldn't possibly afford the kind of classes I get at the studio."

would see the dollar following the pound within a year. Devaluation of the dollar would hit particularly hard at Japan, which has had almost ninety per cent of its reserves in dollars, and a number of Latin-American nations including Mexico, Brazil, and Argentina, which have had an eighty per cent dollar reserve.

Janeway thinks that LBJ's "dollar gamble amounts to a bet on the bludgeon." The Administration's idea is to frighten Europe into taking dollars without calling for gold.

When de Gaulle sees his big summer take from U.S. tourists drying up, so the theory runs, he'll come to heel along with most of the European central banks. But Janeway doubts that the private holders of the "Euro-dollar" will cooperate. A new cycle of world-wide contraction is now in motion.

George Schwartz, the London Sunday Times financial man, was one of the participants in the Mont Pelerin Society economic policy discussions held last September in Vichy, France.

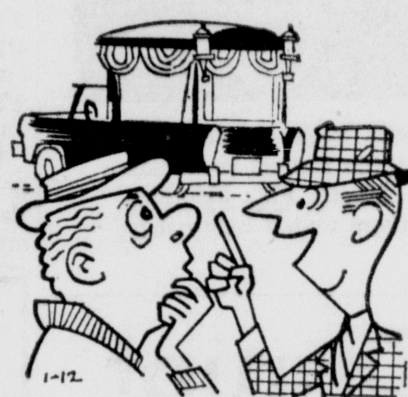

As an observer in Vichy I was particularly taken with his sweet way of phrasing the most gloomy prognostications. He points out that the U.S. shows no desire to learn from what has happened in Britain, and is therefore doomed to repeat all of the Labor government's mistakes. The British have operated on the theory that anything can be afforded at home, since you pay for it in paper that is "owed to yourselves." And they have tried to stave off external foreign travel. (Few British economists made it to the 1966 Mont Pelerin economic sessions in Tokyo, but a bigger contingent including Mr. Schwartz managed to scrounge up enough credit in France to get to Vichy a year later.) The dodges didn't work, and the pound collapsed for the far more fundamental reason that British industry had become inefficient at home, thus making it difficult to export.

The dollar, so the three musketeers of doom that have been mentioned in this column agree in thinking, will hit the toboggan because of a combination of domestic and foreign reasons. A two or three billion dollar annual deficit on our external balance of payments could be digested, but a thirty billion dollar domestic budget deficit must cause every dollar holder abroad to distrust our financial sanity. We may "owe it to ourselves," but why should the private holder of the "Euro-dollar" be caught in the switches when gold is an available alternative?

Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler plans to get together with key members of Congress soon after it reconvenes next Monday to work out a possible tax to discourage travel abroad.

A head tax or a tax on the number of days a person remains abroad are considered major possibilities.

But Congress will have the last word and the outcome at this point is uncertain.

Views on TV - Radio

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Trail of Stanley and Livingstone," the first of NBC's occasional "Great Exploration" series, is the kind of worthy program that good, responsible parents want their children to see. If they happen to be people who enjoy travelogues, they will sit down with the kids and watch, too.

The hour-long special would have gone down easier in a Sunday afternoon time period. It was a documentary—a sort of fancied-up safari in the African wilds. The fancy part was its central figure, former astronaut John Glenn who headed the party and explained where they were and what they were seeing—impressive landscapes, wild animals, colorful natives.

The excuse for the program was that the party of 30 or so persons were following the path of reporter Henry Stanley when, for a journalistic scoop almost one hundred years ago, he spent 236 days hunting for missionary David Livingstone. At journey's end, he uttered the immortal line: "Dr. Livingstone I presume?"

Portions of Stanley's journal, telling of hardship, disease and mutiny among his bearers, were read occasionally. But generally, it stretched the viewer's credibility to try to relate the Stanley expedition to the emergence of African nations today.

Glenn, a pleasant, attractive fellow, seemed to enjoy his African experiences for the most part, and seemed appalled occasionally at the conditions of life he found. At one point, however, the producers felt that the program was becoming a bit tedious—they were correct—so they speeded it up by showing Glenn and company shooting a one-tusked elephant.

As is customary in a television program showing hunting scenes, the elephant was described as a "rogue," and had to be dispatched. This portion, even if the elephant hunt was justified, was distasteful to some segments of the viewing audience.

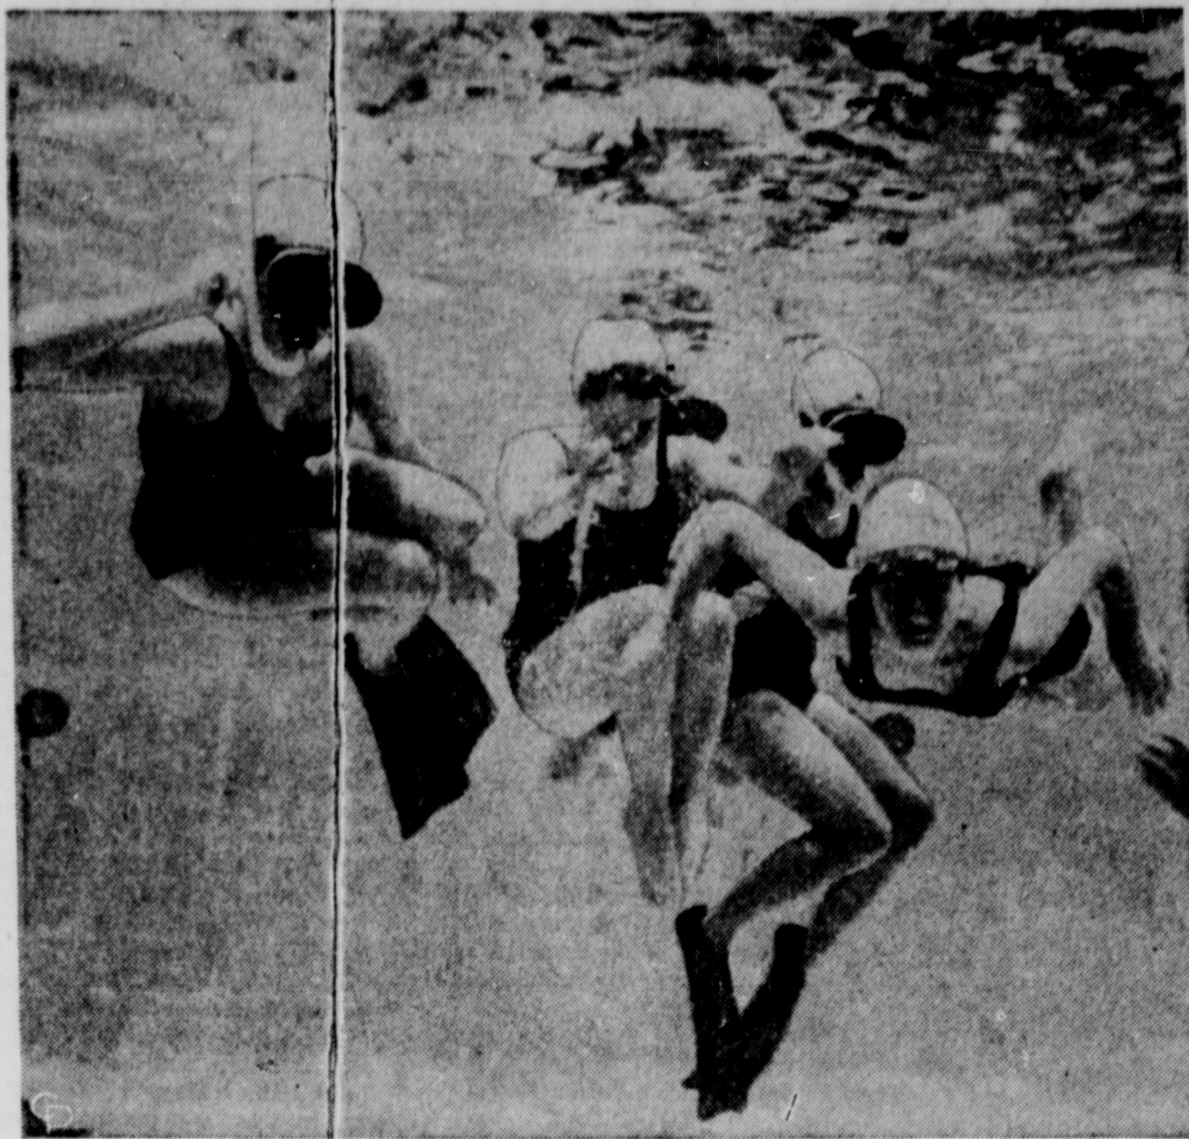

Would you like to break the cigarette habit? CBS, in a somewhat novel approach in its forthcoming "National Smoking Test," will try to offer some constructive suggestions.

Designed by an expert on the subject, it will permit the individual viewer to find some clues about his personal make-up and suggest the reasons he smokes or does not smoke. This self-knowledge, the producer of the series suggests, may help him take the first giant step toward breaking the habit.

The television program that year in and year out attracts a peak audience will occupy its usual 90 minutes of NBC time next Thursday evening—Bob Hope's Christmas Special.

Interfaith Marriages Now Common

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Interfaith marriages, once a rarity in past periods of ethnic and religious aloofness in America, have become a common pattern. And a new study shows the proportion of them still is rising.

Religious analysts see both advantages and disadvantages in the trend.

"All studies show that the intermarried have a high risk of divorce," says Dr. Victor D. Sanua, associate professor of psychology at New York's Yeshiva University, and author of a broad survey of the practice.

However, he adds, this drawback is noticeable chiefly in cases when one party lacks any firm religious commitment, rather than because of a clash between differing religious beliefs.

On the positive side, a recent Catholic-Presbyterian conference concluded that a marriage between a Catholic and Protestant can be a useful contribution toward a fuller grasp of unity in the Christian faith.

"If two people of differing faiths can live together in deep love and understanding, then we have something pointing to the great church of the future," said a conference spokesman, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Henry G. J. Beck, of Lyndhurst, N.J.

Children in mixed marriages, he added, should "become familiar with both traditions" of the parents, and while being reared clearly in one of them, should "be given a real reverence" for the other.

Dr. Sanua's research, drawing figures from a wide number of studies, indicate that the extent of interfaith marriages has increased steadily for more than two decades, and is expected to continue rising.

At present, he says, available statistics indicate an estimated "50 per cent of Catholics marry outside their faith. The percentage for Protestants seems to be about as high. For the Jewish group, it is approximately 17 per cent."

This constitutes a dramatic upswing, he commented, although no precise comparative figures are available for past periods. But a quarter century ago, he added, such a marriage could set neighbors talking.

"It was unusual," he said in an interview. But not anymore.

He said he doubted if the friendlier interreligious climate has stimulated the trend, adding that the main cause lies in the dissolving of old national-ethnic lines, bringing Americans into generally "homogenized groups."

However, he notes, the proportion of intermarriages rises sharply in areas where one group is a small minority, in the midst of another overwhelming-ly predominant group.

For example, the percentage of Catholic marriages to Protestants are much higher in the South, where Protestantism strongly predominates, while the Protestant intermarriage ratio rises steeply in heavily Catholic cities.

Similarly, Jewish intermar-riages go up to 45 to 70 per cent in small cities and rural areas, where they are small minorities.

Views on TV - Radio

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Trail of Stanley and Livingstone," the first of NBC's occasional "Great Exploration" series, is the kind of worthy program that good, responsible parents want their children to see. If they happen to be people who enjoy travelogues, they will sit down with the kids and watch, too.

The hour-long special would have gone down easier in a Sunday afternoon time period. It was a documentary—a sort of fancied-up safari in the African wilds. The fancy part was its central figure, former astronaut John Glenn who headed the party and explained where they were and what they were seeing—impressive landscapes, wild animals, colorful natives.

The excuse for the program was that the party of 30 or so persons were following the path of reporter Henry Stanley when, for a journalistic scoop almost one hundred years ago, he spent 236 days hunting for missionary David Livingstone. At journey's end, he uttered the immortal line: "Dr. Livingstone I presume?"

Portions of Stanley's journal, telling of hardship, disease and mutiny among his bearers, were read occasionally. But generally, it stretched the viewer's credulity to try to relate the Stanley expedition to the emergence of African nations today.

Glenn, a pleasant, attractive fellow, seemed to enjoy his African experiences for the most part, and seemed appalled occasionally at the conditions of life he found. At one point, however, the producers felt that the program was becoming a bit tedious—they were correct—so they spiced it up by showing Glenn and company shooting a one-tusked elephant.

As is customary in a television program showing hunting scenes, the elephant was described as a "rogue," and had to be dispatched. This portion, even if the elephant hunt was justified, was distasteful to some segments of the viewing audience.

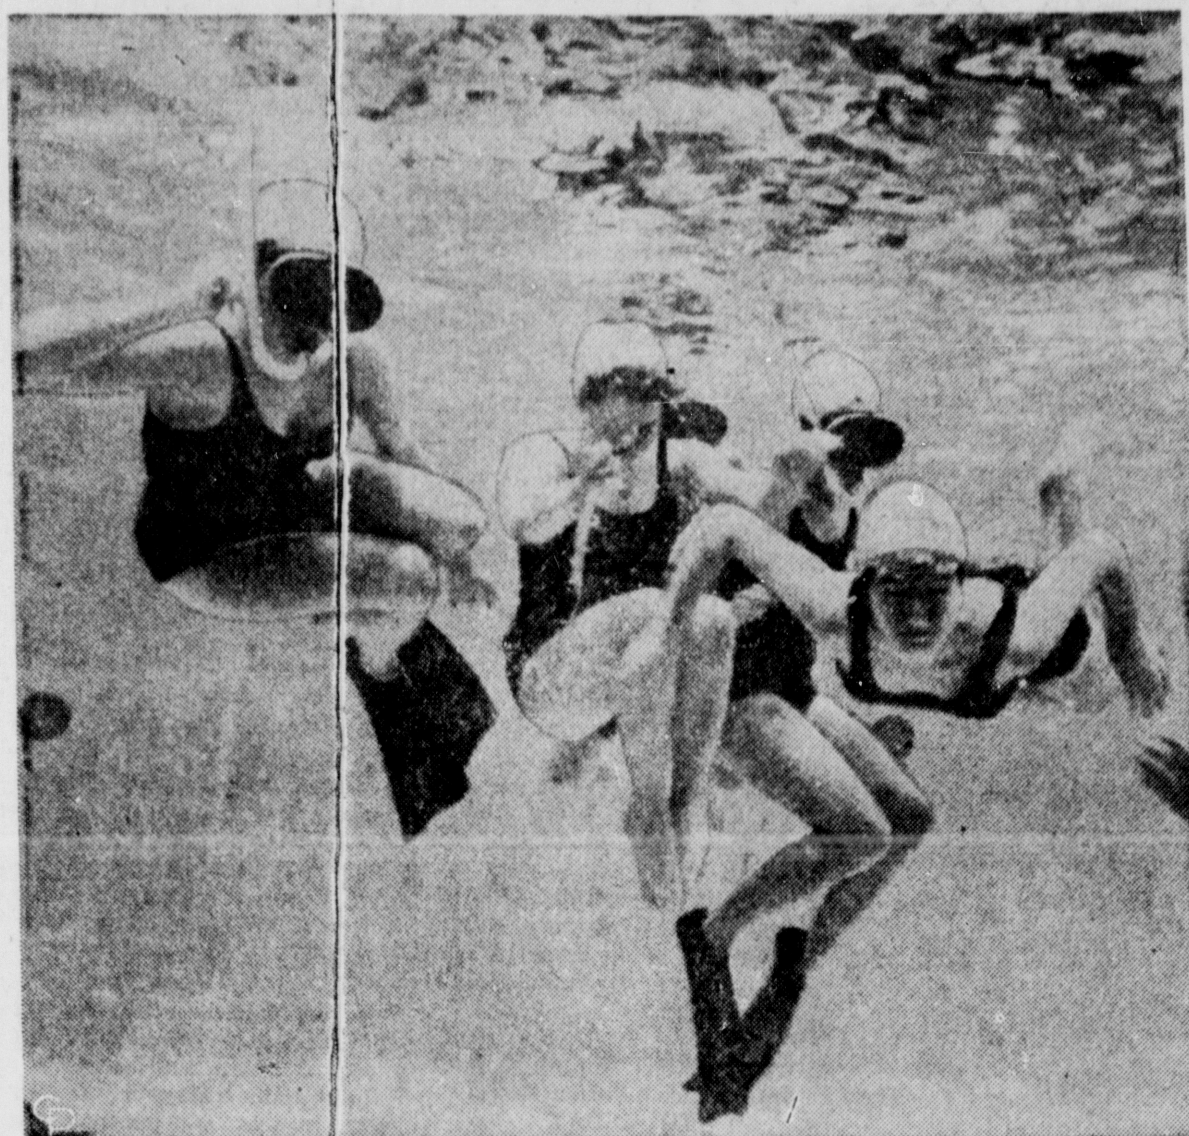

Would you like to break the cigarette habit? CBS, in a somewhat novel approach in its forthcoming "National Smoking Test," will try to offer some constructive suggestions.

The program, to be broadcast next Tuesday, will offer not lectures on the dangers of smoking, but will present the "Insight Development Questionnaire." Designed by an expert on the subject, it will permit the individual viewer to find some clues about his personal make-up and suggest the reasons he smokes or does not smoke. This self-knowledge, the producer of the series suggests, may help him take the first giant step toward breaking the habit.

The television program that year in and year out attracts a peak audience will occupy its usual 90 minutes of NBC time next Thursday evening—Bob Hope's Christmas Special.

As usual, the program will consist of edited film shot during Hope's holiday tour to entertain American service men in Vietnam. It will pre-empt "Ironside" and "Dragnet" on Jan. 18.

ABC will postpone its scheduled broadcast of "Laura," starring Lee Remick, for one week and join the other two major networks on Jan. 17 in covering live President Johnson's state of the union address.

British Gimmick Play Hits Broadway with Large Thud

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK (AP)—A British gimmick play "Staircase" arrived Wednesday night at Broadway's Billmore theater full of small humor and vast boredom.

The squabbles and misunderstandings of humdrum domesticity are rehearsed by author Charles Dyer—with the bickering partners a pair of past-their-prime homosexuals as the fashionably topical twist.

There's a real of dialogue along the lines of "You ramshackle twit" and "you're all intertwined Charley" but the maudlin motif brims with bleats of self-pity and too-familiar talk about wanting to be wanted.

If Dyer has any original thoughts or insight into the realm of deviate behavior he conceals them fully behind incantations about "God help us all and Oscar Wilde" superficial Soho-slant jokes and anagrams.

Perhaps something Freudian is intended by the word game in which Dyer uses his own name for one character and variations of it for everyone else mentioned in the script.

Eli Wallach who always plays rugged guys and Milo O'Shea a Dubliner acclaimed as Leopold Bloom in the film "Ulysses" enact the barber-shop duet without over-stressing the epicene aspects. Wallach flits a mantilla across his shoulders and there are some other Ariel touches but camp-followers will be disappointed.

Barry Morse on TV screens four years as the relentless pursuer of "The Fugitive" directs the pair through their recital of sordid escapades and heedless vanities without generating much vitality.

"Staircase" is a one-way trip to nothing much.

Trustees Hit Demonstrations

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP)—Youngstown State University officials have been empowered by the board of trustees suspend or dismiss students and faculty members who cause demonstrations which disrupt classes.

Trustees said they hope the action this week will help avert any possible demonstrations such as those which forced the temporary closing of Central State University last November.

Rule Slaying Was Justifiable

CLEVELAND (AP)—The police prosecutor's office has made a ruling of justifiable homicide in the stabbing death of Nora Williams, 50, a former mental patient who allegedly was killed when he tried to rob a 41-year-old East Side woman Wednesday.

Police said Williams, who has a criminal record, was stabbed by Katherine Travis at a bus stop on East 79th Street. Mrs. Travis told police Williams accosted her and held a knife to her neck. She said she grabbed the knife from Williams and began swinging at him.

Interfaith Marriages Now Common

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Interfaith marriages, once a rarity in past periods of ethnic and religious aloofness in America, have become a common pattern. And a new study shows the proportion of them still is rising.

Religious analysts see both advantages and disadvantages in the trend.

"All studies show that the intermarried have a high risk of divorce," says Dr. Victor D. Sanua, associate professor of psychology at New York's Yeshiva University, and author of a broad survey of the practice.

However, he adds, this drawback is noticeable chiefly in cases when one party lacks any firm religious commitment, rather than because of a clash between differing religious beliefs.

On the positive side, a recent Catholic-Presbyterian conference concluded that a marriage between a Catholic and Protestant can be a useful contribution toward a fuller grasp of unity in the Christian faith.

"If two people of differing faiths can live together in deep love and understanding, then we have something pointing to the great church of the future," said a conference spokesman, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Henry G. J. Beck, of Lyndhurst, N.J.

Children in mixed marriages, he added, should "become familiar with both traditions" of the parents, and while being reared clearly in one of them, should "be given a real reverence for the other."

Dr. Sanua's research, drawing figures from a wide number of studies, indicate that the extent of interfaith marriages has increased steadily for more than two decades, and is expected to continue rising.

At present, he says, available statistics indicate an estimated 50 per cent of Catholics marry outside their faith. The percentage for Protestants seems to be about as high. For the Jewish group, it is approximately 17 per cent.

This constitutes a dramatic upswing, he commented, although no precise comparative figures are available for past periods. But a quarter century ago, he added, such a marriage could set neighbors talking.

"It was unusual," he said in an interview. But not anymore.

He said he doubted if the friendlier interreligious climate has stimulated the trend, adding that the main cause lies in the dissolving of old national-ethnic lines, bringing Americans into generally "homogenized groups."

However, he notes, the proportion of intermarriages rises sharply in areas where one group is a small minority, in the midst of another overwhelming, predominantly group.

For example, the percentage of Catholic marriages to Protestants are much higher in the South, where Protestantism strongly predominates, while the Protestant intermarriage ratio rises steeply in heavily Catholic cities.

Similarly, Jewish intermar-

riages go up to 45 to 70 per cent in small cities and rural areas, where they are small minorities.

Dr. Sanua's report, entitled "Marriage Counseling: Psychology-Ideology," was edited by Dr. H. L. Silverman, of Seton Hall University, and issued by Charles Thomas publishers, of Springfield, Ill.

New Appliance Designs Eliminate Many Problems

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

Many complaints about household necessities begin with this question: "Why doesn't somebody design a something-or-other that would . . . ?"

Somebody occasionally does. Here, for example, are a few new answers to this oft-asked question.

Food - warmer Feature: If just what you've always wanted is a stove that would keep food at serving temperature without burning it or drying it out, rejoice and seek the new range equipped with twin infrared lamps. They're installed on the underside of the control console and, when switched on, keep foods placed on the rear of the range cooking top warm.

Fabulous Finish: A new spray-on product makes for pleasing pressing. A fabric finish as well as a deodorant, it eliminates the need to dampen clothes, gives fabric body and inhibits the growth and odor of perspiration-caused bacteria.

At Your Service: There's never a pencil near your phone . . . or a piece of paper for that matter? There will be if you purchase a plastic slate designed to fit over and around a wall phone and provide writing space on either side of it. Available in a variety of colors, the slate's writing surface can be sponged clean. A little pad for memos you want to stash in your handbag and a marker come with it.

Easy To See: Just a small change often makes an efficient and effective difference.

For example, one manufacturer has elevated the control panels on a new washer and dryer so that it's a cinch to see 'em and make selections. The controls are placed about two feet above washer and dryer and, as a bonus, space in between, is occupied with handy storage bins roomy enough to house large detergent boxes, half-gallon bleach bottles, an electric iron and other laundry aids.

Useful Rack: A versatile rack—10 1/2" long x 10" wide x 3" high—organizes space. Store your phone atop the rack and stash your phone directory away underneath it. Or use the rack in the freezer—ice

OES Chapter Observes Birthday

Circleville Chapter 90 Order of Eastern Star observed its seventieth birthday during its Tuesday meeting in the Masonic Lodge Hall.

Billy Osborne, worthy matron, welcomed members, visitors, past matrons and past patrons of Circleville Chapter and special guest Wanda Kitchen, deputy grand matron of Ohio District 23.

Beverly Currence, associate conductress presented a short lecture.

Miss Marie Hamilton discussed the birthday of the chapter.

Announcement was made of a meeting Jan. 23 honoring Masons, also school of instructions Jan. 30 in Chillicothe; Rainbow Girls Installation Jan. 31 and Inspection Night April 23.

Refreshments in keeping with the birthday theme were served by Elaine Cook, Katherine Arledge, Alys Hines, Margaret Shane, Elizabeth Ward, Helen Reed, Miriam Barnhart, Frankie Elsea and Tom Elsea.

Ever cook rice in tomato juice instead of water? If you try this, add a bay leaf along with the salt usually used.

cube trays underneath it and frozen food packages atop it.

New and/or improved products that solve old problems keep coming along all the time. This is because designers wisely tune in when women complain. Their gripes often inspire designs that eliminate them.

New Appliance Designs Eliminate Many Problems

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

Many complaints about household necessities begin with this question: "Why doesn't somebody design a something-or-other that would . . . ?"

Somebody occasionally does. Here, for example, are a few new answers to this oft-asked question.

Food - warmer Feature: If just what you've always wanted is a stove that would keep food at serving temperature without burning it or drying it out, rejoice and seek the new range equipped with twin infrared lamps. They're installed on the underside of the control console and, when switched on, keep foods placed on the rear of the range cooking top warm.

Fabulous Finish: A new spray-on product makes for pleasing pressing. A fabric finish as well as a deodorant, it eliminates the need to dampen clothes, gives fabric body and inhibits the growth and odor of perspiration-caused bacteria.

At Your Service: There's never a pencil near your phone . . . or a piece of paper for that matter? There will be if you purchase a plastic slate designed to fit over and around a wall phone and provide writing space on either side of it. Available in a variety of colors, the slate's writing surface can be sponged clean. A little pad for memos you want to stash in your handbag and a marker come with it.

Easy To See: Just a small change often makes an efficient and effective difference.

For example, one manufacturer has elevated the control panels on a new washer and dryer so that it's a cinch to see 'em and make selections. The controls are placed about two feet above washer and dryer and, as a bonus, space in between, is occupied with handy storage bins roomy enough to house large detergent boxes, half-gallon bleach bottles, an electric iron and other laundry aids.

Useful Rack: A versatile rack—10 3/4" long x 10" wide x 3" high—organizes space. Store your phone atop the rack and stash your phone directory away underneath it. Or use the rack in the freezer—ice cube trays underneath it and frozen food packages atop it.

New and/or improved products that solve old problems keep coming along all the time. This is because designers wisely tune in when women complain. Their gripes often inspire designs that eliminate them.

Need clear fat-free chicken broth? If you open a can of chicken broth and fat has hardened on top, turn the broth into a strainer lined with a double thickness of clean white muslin and the cloth will trap the fat! Cheddar cheese soup often benefits by the addition of some finely grated carrot. The carrot should be added as the soup slowly heats so the shreds will partly soften.

Pumpkin-pie spice on your shelf? Add a pinch of it to stewed tomatoes when you are heating them.

Trend among Some SOS Dinner Is Dissension

By DARYL BROWN

Currently there is a trend among some of our nation's youth of having a "no-care" attitude and a spirit of dissension toward the established pattern of doing things. Consequently they seem to care very little about their government and what it is doing.

The problem with this kind of attitude is that whether youth is concerned or not the transactions of government are going to affect them and have a bearing on their lives in some way, sooner or later. These people are always ready to criticize the government for what it does, but they offer no better alternatives. Criticism of the government or anything else for that matter, is good only when it is done with the intent of effecting improvement.

The primary argument for their attitude that these youths present is that since they are not old enough to vote, they don't have a voice in the government. But just as adults project an influence on the younger set, so, too, can the opposite be true. A teenager who has taken the time to form a really intelligent opinion from the known facts will have his comment on a subject respected and considered by those older than he. The swifter who just throws out an opinion from the top of his head, with no validating evidence to back him up, will be paid little attention.

Under our form of government anyone can have just as much a voice in it as he wants to have. But knowing how to make that voice heard is the criteria that will determine its effectiveness.

CHS Students Share Many New Year's Resolutions

January is a month of many important holidays, with New Year's Day as a highlight. This date has long been a time for reflection and resolution. Many are eager to get rid of the old and take on the new.

Once long ago someone declared: "So the first month of the year, like it's namesake, looks back over the past, and forward to the future with hopes of good resolutions."

Listed here are a few of the many resolutions CHS students offered to share:

Don Cozad: "Not to race my Rambler."

Daryl Brown: "To run the mile in 4:17."

Jack Carle: "To try and get my Third Class Radio telephone operator's Permit with Broadcast Endorsement from the FCC on Jan. 9 or 10."

Judy Collins: "Not to run around."

Gary Garrett: "Slow down on driving so fast."

Wanda Fyffe: "To look both ways."

Steve Francis: "Make a New Year's resolution last year, not to make one this year because I never carry them out."

Rick Compton: "I resolve to try and get my library books in on time."

Walter Dilly: "To obey all school policies and to get along with all my teachers."

Linda Hill: "To stop biting my fingernails."

Ann Hedges: "To change my ways, and to think twice before acting."

Lynn Hatfield: "To be more tolerant of others actions."

Debbie Miller: "Try to catch up on my beauty sleep."

Chuck Downing: "Quit loafing and crack down on homework."

Debbie Smith: "Learn to pronounce certain words such as soil and boil."

By BEEZZIE ANDERSON and JACK CARLE

Mrs. Lois Brobst is one of the most active teachers at CHS. She was graduated from Rose-dale High School in Indiana and Indiana State University. While at ISU she was a member of the Delta Sigma Sorority.

Mrs. Brobst teaches personal and business typing, shorthand I and II and office practice at CHS. When asked how she keeps interested in these subjects, she replied, "We strive for perfection and we try to instill and be satisfied only with their very best. In any task we start, we finish. We don't quit because quitters don't get any place."

Mrs. Brobst is also qualified to teach English and home economics. Her reply to why she chose these subjects to teach was, "When I went to college I thought everybody should know how to cook, so I took home economics. Everybody is judged by the way he speaks, so I chose English. I could work in an office, if I had business, so I took a business course."

Activities at CHS include adviser to Senior SOS. In the past she has directed plays and been chairman of style shows.

Her outside activities include membership in the Ohio Education Association and Circleville Teachers Association. She is a charter member of Delta Kappa Gamma, which is the National Honor Society for women teachers. Mrs. Brobst is also president of the Child Study Patron League. She is secretary of the Women's Organization, and a Sunday school teacher in the Lutheran Church. She also sponsors a knitting club called the "Yarn Spinners" and works part time at Sharff's.

Mrs. Brobst's reaction to CHS students is "If I didn't think they were tops, I would not be here. We don't have problems like other schools have had. I am proud of CHS. I take each student as a part of my own family. The faculty and students and I get along just fine, so I couldn't ask for better treatment from them."

Mrs. Brobst resides at 1130 Atwater Ave. She has three children: Nancy, a sophomore at Capital University, Marsha, a freshman at Otterbein College and John a junior at CHS.

Nursing Club Started in 1965 at CHS

By MARY PLUMMER and ROZANNE MCCAIN

This week's club feature is the Future Nurses' Club. Made up of 12 members, the club is an international club, all of which have nearly the same name. Even though the name applies to nursing only, one of its purposes is to stimulate an interest in various fields of medicine. Another purpose is to help its members decide whether a career in medicine is for them.

The club is opened to boys and girls interested in medicine, grades 10 thru 12, and who carry a "C" average in all academic subjects. The advantage of the club is to help one decide what he wants to do for a career.

In 1965 the club was formed, and the officers made up the constitution in December of that year.

In recent years the club has had a variety of speakers, from a physical therapist to an anesthesiologist to the head nurse of a hospital. The members have toured Mt. Carmel School of Nursing and plan on visiting many more hospitals as well as having more speakers.

Rusk Takes Long View Of Past Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk says the future's overriding problem will be to ease the pressures of a growing world population before they threaten to touch off nuclear war.

And a prime achievement of the Johnson-Kennedy administrations he has served, Rusk said Wednesday is that "we have added seven years to the time in which the nuclear bomb has not been dropped in anger."

In an interview with The Associated Press, Rusk set a general time limit of up to a generation for meeting population demands before they get out of hand and a 5 to 10 year estimate for international agreement to curb the atomic weapons spread.

"The increase in the number of people who inhabit the globe increases the demands for opportunities for decent lives—food, shelter, health, education, employment," he said.

"They are the problems of a growing human family in a stingy universe," added Rusk. This population problem rivals the nuclear problem and I think we have a limited amount of time to deal with both of them."

"I'd say 20 to 30 years from now the problem would become acute, extremely dangerous, unless it has been solved then," said Rusk.

The danger of a nuclear catastrophe appeared dominant in Rusk's mind as he reviewed his tenure as secretary of state. Only a half dozen men in U.S. history have held the No. 1 foreign affairs job as long.

Ex-Police Chief Asks Reinstatement

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Supreme Court was asked today to return John Mroik to his job as police chief of Brunswick, Medina County.

Mroik was fired Dec. 12, 1966 by Mayor Alvin E. Wolff, but the chief said no charges were filed against him.

In a mandamus action, Common Pleas Court ordered Mroik restored to his job, but an appellate court reversed and an appeal was carried to the high court.

We don't quit because quitters don't get any place."

Mrs. Brobst is also qualified to teach English and home economics. Her reply to why she chose these subjects to teach was, "When I went to college I thought everybody should know how to cook, so I took home economics. Everybody is judged by the way he speaks, so I chose English. I could work in an office, if I had business, so I took a business course."

Activities at CHS include adviser to Senior SOS. In the past she has directed plays and been chairman of style shows.

Her outside activities include membership in the Ohio Education Association and Circleville Teachers Association. She is a charter member of Delta Kappa Gamma, which is the National Honor Society for women teachers. Mrs. Brobst is also president of the Child Study Patron League. She is secretary of the Women's Organization, and a Sunday school teacher in the Lutheran Church. She also sponsors a knitting club called the "Yarn Spinners" and works part time at Sharff's.

Mrs. Brobst's reaction to CHS students is "If I didn't think they were tops, I would not be here. We don't have problems like other schools have had. I am proud of CHS. I take each student as a part of my own family. The faculty and students and I get along just fine, so I couldn't ask for better treatment from them."

Mrs. Brobst resides at 1139 Atwater Ave. She has three children: Nancy, a sophomore at Capital University, Marsha, a freshman at Otterbein College and John a junior at CHS.

Rusk Takes Long View Of Past Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk says the future's overriding problem will be to ease the pressures of a growing world population before they threaten to touch off nuclear war.

And a prime achievement of the Johnson-Kennedy administrations he has served, Rusk said Wednesday is that "we have added seven years to the time in which the nuclear bomb has not been dropped in anger."

In an interview with The Associated Press, Rusk set a general time limit of up to a generation for meeting population demands before they get out of hand and a 5 to 10 year estimate for international agreement to curb the atomic weapons spread.

"The increase in the number of people who inhabit the globe increases the demands for opportunities for decent lives—food, shelter, health, education, employment," he said.

"They are the problems of a growing human family in a stingy universe," added Rusk. This population problem rivals the nuclear problem and I think we have a limited amount of time to deal with both of them."

"I'd say 20 to 30 years from now the problem would become acute, extremely dangerous, unless it has been solved then," said Rusk.

The danger of a nuclear catastrophe appeared dominant in Rusk's mind as he reviewed his tenure as secretary of state. Only a half dozen men in U.S. history have held the No. 1 foreign affairs job as long.

Ex-Police Chief Asks Reinstatement

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Supreme Court was asked today to return John Mroik to his job as police chief of Brunswick, Medina County.

Mroik was fired Dec. 12, 1966 by Mayor Alvin E. Wolff, but the chief said no charges were filed against him.

In a mandamus action, Common Pleas Court ordered Mroik restored to his job, but an appellate court reversed and an appeal was carried to the high court.

Three Students Chosen To Edit Red and Black

By PAT COLEMAN and JONNIE THOMAS

One senior and two juniors were chosen by the Journalism class as co-editors for January. They are senior, Sharon Johnson, and juniors Debbie Stonerock and Mike Smith.

Sharon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Johnson. She lives at 131 Edison Ave. She is 17 and in the general course with psychology being her favorite subject. After graduation she plans to attend a cosmetology school.

"I was surprised and felt honored to be chosen," was Sharon's reply when asked her feelings on being chosen.

"I was very surprised and honored that the class chose me," was Debbie's reply when asked how she felt about being chosen as co-editor.

Debbie is a junior enrolled in the college prep course. She resides at 1205 S. Court Street with her mother Mrs. Jane Stonerock.

Debbie is very active in various clubs. She is a member of the Luther League, is prom chairman of the Junior class, publicity chairman of the Senior SOS and is Band president. Her hobbies include playing the piano and collecting angels.

She has an interest in animals, especially in snakes.

Mike Smith is a junior enrolled in the commercial course. He resides at 830 Maplewood Ave. with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Sam Smith.

Mike is an active member of the annual staff and wrestling team, is supreme court justice of the Stooze club and is on the football team.

When asked his reaction to being chosen co-editor of the month Mike replied, "Well, truthfully, I was surprised but I also feel it is a great privilege and I'll try my best to do a good job."

Student March All for Naught

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A Band of Ohio State University students marched on Ohio Union on the campus Wednesday, planning to picket a U. S. Air Force recruiting team, but found only Russian educators.

Demonstration leader David Travers and Bern Anderson, both graduate students in philosophy, charged that OSU officials had told the Air Force recruiter to stay away from the campus because of the protest. Air Force officers denied it.

ESKIMOS RESCUED FROM ICE FLOE—Plucked from a floating sheet of ice by Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Air Force men using a helicopter, two eskimos, Eyo Airtut (left), 21, and John Tugat, 42, relax in Winnipeg, Man. They suffered frostbite and hunger in an eight-day ordeal.

IN THE OLD DAYS

In Aunt Miranda's day there was no question about whether you went to church on Sunday. You didn't stay home because it was raining or snowing, or because you had a slight headache. You went—by horse-drawn wagons or carriages—a much harder trek than it is today.

Maybe because it was harder, people appreciated it more. Maybe in that era of pre-modern conveniences people had a better sense of values. They seemed to know, at any rate, what was really important.

Of course, the church is just as necessary today as it was in Aunt Miranda's day. Certainly the complexities of our present generation make life's problems seem increasingly abundant. Hadn't we better go to church next Sunday—and see for ourselves?

IN THE OLD DAYS

In Aunt Miranda's day there was no question about whether you went to church on Sunday. You didn't stay home because it was raining or snowing, or because you had a slight headache. You went—by horse-drawn wagons or carriages—a much harder trek than it is today.

Maybe because it was harder, people appreciated it more. Maybe in that era of pre-modern conveniences people had a better sense of values. They seemed to know, at any rate, what was really important.

Of course, the church is just as necessary today as it was in Aunt Miranda's day. Certainly the complexities of our present generation make life's problems seem increasingly abundant. Hadn't we better go to church next Sunday—and see for ourselves?

HHH Tour Brings Focus On Africa

TUNIS (AP) — Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey believes his grueling tour of nine African nations will bring the United States substantial long-term benefits in confidence and good will among African nations.

But the most significant result of his high-speed, 26,500-mile safari—which ended Thursday—could be a sharpened awareness in Washington of Africa's towering political, social and economic problems.

Some African leaders began to doubt that the United States really cares about their continent after Congress cut foreign aid and private American interests blocked commodity agreements which would have stabilized the market in certain African staple products.

Humphrey, who returned to Washington Thursday, convinced the leaders he met that the Johnson administration is determined to fight for more aid and to press for the rapid conclusion of commodity agreements for cocoa, coffee, rubber and other products.

The vice president repeatedly pointed out that the African countries should seek channels of assistance other than direct aid, including the Export-Import Bank, the Food for Peace Act, the African Development Bank and private investors.

He agreed with African leaders who complained that congressional action limiting economic aid in Africa to 10 countries was unjust, unreasonable discrimination.

Van Allen Still Probing Radiation Belts

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

IOWA CITY Iowa (AP) — Ten years after the discovery of the radiation belts that bear his name Dr. James A. Van Allen still is probing mysteries of the deadly bands which curl around the earth like a giant boa constrictor.

Among the puzzles to be unraveled are:

1. What is the source of a huge circular stream of radiation particles that travels around the globe 10,000 to 20,000 miles above the equator within the outer Van Allen belt? Called an "extraterrestrial ring current" the stream acts like a huge loop of electrically charged wire and is believed to be a major cause of magnetic storms communications blackouts and the northern lights.

2. How do protons and electrons flowing from storms on the sun enter the Van Allen belts?

3. What is the connection between "whistlers"—lightning-created radio waves that send a shrill sound through space—and the movement of particles within the belts?

Some answers may be learned next spring when the Injun 5 satellite is launched into orbit. It currently is being built by Van Allen and his associates at the State University of Iowa's Physics Research Center here.

Injun 5's instruments will be more sophisticated than any of the more than 20 satellite devices that Van Allen's team has sent into space.

They will Van Allen said "be a considerable improvement over the simple Geiger counter we had in Explorer 1."

It was 10 years ago on Jan. 31 1958 that Explorer 1 soared into orbit as America's first satellite. Van Allen's Geiger counter discovered that the earth is surrounded by a band of intense radiation trapped by the earth's magnetic field.

Before then scientists generally believed that the earth's atmosphere merely merged with interplanetary space at an altitude of about 600 miles.

To learn as much as possible about this mysterious find Van Allen's Iowa group working with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has rocketed instruments into space at every opportunity.

Van Allen concluded that it is really dozens of smaller bands all within one big radiation region extending from about 300 to 50,000 miles above the earth.

Carney Completes Manager Program

Mr. Lindy G. Carney, 565 Edgewood Drive, supervisor at Owens - Illinois, recently completed a first level course in Wittenberg University's management development program.

The university offers instruction on four levels to supervisory personnel from industry. Areas emphasized in the study programs are art, human relations, economics, communications and business operations.

There are two major zones: the relatively stable inner belt and the outer belt which is extremely time-varying and dependent upon the solar wind—a great cloud of radiation flowing through space from thermonuclear explosions on the sun.

"The more we found the more complex and baffling the belts became," Van Allen said. "They're a vastly complex physical system. We thought at first that magnetic fields were the dominant force. But now we feel the generation of electric fields is important in the generation of electrons and protons in the belts."

When the belts first were discovered it was felt they would pose a serious danger to astronaut flights. But Van Allen's investigations have shown that spacemen can travel safely through them as long as they don't linger in the heavy concentration of radiation in the lower section some 400 miles above the earth.

Van Allen today leaves the design and assembly of satellite instruments mainly to his associates at Iowa with physics students helping. Seniors aboard Injun 5 are the responsibility of three young Iowa professors who learned under Van Allen—Drs. Donald Gurnett, Louis A. Frank and S. M. Krimigis.

Gurnett said that difficult to detect low energy particles constitute 90 per cent of the radiation in the belts. Until recently he said instruments were unable to locate them. But gradually Iowa sensors have counted lower and lower energy particles and Injun 5 should be able to record most of them.

He said the satellite should provide the clearest picture yet of the processes at work within the belts and also help determine whether the whistling radio waves accelerate particles. The whistling waves are created by flashes of lightning near the earth. They travel upward into the belts and emit shrill tones as they race at various frequencies along the magnetic lines of force.

Failure To Yield License Draws Fine, Probation

Robert Fetherolf, Route 4, pleaded no contest to charges of failing to surrender his driver's license when ordered to do so by the registrar of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

He was fined $50 plus costs and 15 days in jail with $25 of the fine and the jail sentence suspended. He will remain on probation for one year.

Kenneth Bucy, 25, Mount Sterling, forfeited a $24 bond set on charges of speeding 65 miles in a 50 mile zone.

Harold Mumaw 41 of 626 Clinton St., forfeited a $34 bond set on charges of driving a truck with an overweight load.

The court collected $189 in fines and bond forfeitures from out-of-county motorists.

Dear Abby: She's Single at 57, Likes It That Way

DEAR ABBY: Where does everyone get the silly idea that if a woman isn't married she is a lonely, miserable, sex-starved creature.

I am 57 years old, could easily pass for 45, and I don't know a married woman I'd trade places with. I have four boy friends going at once, have a good-paying position, a home of my own, trade my car every other year, and I can do what I please with my own money.

I don't have to eat my heart out over a cheating husband, and I wouldn't have one around again on a full time basis for anything in the world. I am single by choice after having been married long enough to know what it's like. I like it better this way.

BORN FREE
DEAR BORN: I'll bet your boy friends like it better, too.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 26 years. During this time my mother has stolen several petty items from my home. They have not amounted to very much—certainly not enough to make a fuss about, but it has been very difficult for me to remain silent when I see them in her home.

The latest item, however, is a dinner ring my husband gave me for my 25th wedding anniversary. If I still had it I would wear it only on special occasions, but my mother never takes it off her finger. Every time I see her wearing my ring it makes me sick and nervous. How can she be so heartless?

My husband says that I am "nuts"—that I should ask my mother for my ring, but I just cannot bring myself to say the words. Can you tell me what to do? I hate scenes and trouble.

HEARTSICK
DEAR HEARTSICK: My dear lady, your mother cannot possibly be of sound mind to steal a ring from you and wear it constantly in your presence. If you don't get your mother to a doctor and investigate her mental condition, your husband will have just cause to be concerned about your own.

DEAR ABBY: You recently had a letter in your column from a service man who complained because he didn't get any mail. One very important question: Did he WRITE to anybody? My own case: My boy friend (fiance) called me collect last MAY from Massachusetts, where he was in an army school. He said he was being shipped out the following day and would write to me as soon as he had an address where I could write to him.

In JUNE he sent me a postcard from Athens, Greece. He said he was having a "great" time and was on his way to Ethiopia. (Still no address where I could write to him.)

In AUGUST he wrote from Ethiopia saying he had been there for two months and it wasn't bad at all. This time he included an address, so I answered his letter right away and I haven't heard from him since. He complained in his letter that nobody had written to him. (I wonder where he expected them to address their letters?) He isn't in a war zone, and he is not suffering any hardships because he writes that he is living in a bungalow and is teaching at the university at night. What do you think of this?

DISGUSTED
DEAR DISGUSTED: I think your fiance is lazy, inconsiderate, and something less than gung ho about you. And unless he can explain his long silences, shower him with indifference.

Ohio Supreme Court Upholds Bus Purchase Ruling

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Supreme Court let stand Wednesday a Franklin County Common Pleas Court decision that rules and regulations on centralized bus purchases adopted by the State Board of Education in 1965 were unlawful and unreasonable.

The issue concerns reimbursement by the state of local school bus purchases.

The 10th District Appellate Court had dismissed the case because appropriations totaling nearly $2.5 million for 1965-67 already had been spent, leaving the case moot without issue.

But the state board appealed to the high court for a ruling on grounds that 1967-69 appropriations of more than $9 million were involved.

The attorney general's office said court refusal to review the appeal would not affect bus purchases by local school boards but might require action by the legislature and the state board to clarify future centralized buying.

In other actions, the Supreme Court:

Rejected the appeal of Marcella A. Caferro from refusal of Lorain County courts to award damages for the death of her husband, Orlando, from burns received when electricity arced from a 132,000-volt line to the crane he was riding. Caferro died Aug. 4, 1958, two weeks after the accident on a sewer construction project in Lorain. His widow alleged negligence in her wrongful death suit against Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. and the Ohio Edison Co.

Let stand lower court dismissal of a suit by Canton Lodge 107 of the Italian Sons and daughters of America for renewal of its D4 private club liquor permit. The State Liquor Department refused renewal Nov.

4, 1964, on grounds the club sold $1 bar privileges to permit liquor sales to the public.

Affirmed, a refusal of Hancock County Appellate Court to order a referendum election on Findlay's 1 per cent city income tax of Jan. 1, 1967.

Unanimously affirmed refusal of Franklin County Common Pleas Court to enjoin the State

Board of Education from consolidating three school districts in Jefferson County. Voters approved consolidation in the Indian Creek Local School District May 3, 1966, and it became effective the following June 13. Robert Davis and three other residents of Mingo Junction unsuccessfully sought an injunction but an appellate court invalidated the merger on grounds that desires of residents of Cross Creek Local, Wayne Local and Mingo Junction exempted village school districts were not considered. The supreme court, in turn, reversed the appeals court and held that resident desires were considered in a study by the state board.

Sixes; Ones Are Losers In Ohio's Post Offices

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sixes and ones can be winners at dice but they were losers at stamp windows around Ohio this week.

The Post Office Department upped the price of a letter from five cents to six cents Sunday.

Filibuster Over Rights Bill Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield says the next session of Congress could open with a civil rights filibuster.

A civil rights bill, virtually certain to ignite heated debate, already is on the Senate docket as the opening business after Congress reconvenes Monday.

"I think there's going to be some conversation on it," Mansfield said of the measure. He added in a Wednesday interview that the debate "could be lengthy."

The measure is designed to protect Negroes and civil rights workers from racial violence. It would make it a federal crime to use violence or threats to interfere with the exercise of civil rights by members of minority groups.

"I'm very hopeful we can pass the bill," he added.

But Mansfield said the measure "is in deep trouble" if Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen opposes its terms. And Dirksen has said he will.

Many postal outlets didn't have enough stamps.

There was a rush for one-cent stamps — needed to bring the mail fee up to par for holders of old five-cent stamps — and a heavy demand for new six-centers.

At Cincinnati, the Fountain Square Post Office sold $14,985 in stamps, compared to a daily average of from $5,000 to $7,000.

The crowd at Springfield's main post office looked like a pre-Christmas rush.

"One firm alone mailed 60,000 letters Saturday (day before the rate change)," said Springfield Postmaster Joe Dennison. "By beating the deadline they saved a total of $600."

The Canton Repository billed Monday's post office business as the city's biggest one-cent sale.

Canton Postmaster Glenn G. Isenman ran low on one-centers and borrowed 120,000 from Alliance.

Youngstown postal authorities told patrons to stop taping pennies to letters alongside five-cent stamps. The coppers are hard on machines which handle mail.

Ohio Supreme Court Upholds Bus Purchase Ruling

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Supreme Court let stand Wednesday a Franklin County Common Pleas Court decision that rules and regulations on centralized bus purchases adopted by the State Board of Education in 1965 were unlawful and unreasonable.

The issue concerns reimbursement by the state of local school bus purchases.

The 10th District Appellate Court had dismissed the case because appropriations totaling nearly $2.5 million for 1965-67 already had been spent, leaving the case moot without issue. But the state board appealed to the high court for a ruling on grounds that 1967-69 appropriations of more than $9 million were involved.

The attorney general's office said court refusal to review the appeal would not affect bus purchases by local school boards but might require action by the legislature and the state board to clarify future centralized buying.

In other actions, the Supreme Court:

Rejected the appeal of Marcella A. Caferro from refusal of Lorain County courts to award damages for the death of her husband, Orlando, from burns received when electricity arced from a 132,000-volt line to the crane he was riding. Caferro died Aug. 4, 1958, two weeks after the accident on a sewer construction project in Lorain. His widow alleged negligence in her wrongful death suit against Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. and the Ohio Edison Co.

Let stand lower court dismissal of a suit by Canton Lodge 107 of the Italian Sons and daughters of America for renewal of its D4 private club liquor permit. The State Liquor Department refused renewal Nov.

4, 1964, on grounds the club sold $1 bar privileges to permit liquor sales to the public.

Affirmed, a refusal of Hancock County Appellate Court to order a referendum election on Findlay's 1 per cent city income tax of Jan. 1, 1967.

Unanimously affirmed refusal of Franklin County Common Pleas Court to enjoin the State

Board of Education from consolidating three school districts in Jefferson County. Voters approved consolidation in the Indian Creek Local School District May 3, 1966, and it became effective the following June 13. Robert Davis and three other residents of Mingo Junction unsuccessfully sought an injunction but an appellate court invalidated the merger on grounds that desires of residents of Cross Creek Local, Wayne Local and Mingo Junction exempted village school districts were not considered. The supreme court, in turn, reversed the appeals court and held that residents' desires were considered in a study by the state

Sixes; Ones Are Losers In Ohio's Post Offices

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sixes and ones can be winners at dice but they were losers at stamp windows around Ohio this week.

The Post Office Department upped the price of a letter from five cents to six cents Sunday.

Filibuster Over Rights Bill Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield says the next session of Congress could open with a civil rights filibuster.

A civil rights bill, virtually certain to ignite heated debate, already is on the Senate docket as the opening business after Congress reconvenes Monday.

"I think there's going to be some conversation on it," Mansfield said of the measure. He added in a Wednesday interview that the debate "could be lengthy."

The measure is designed to protect Negroes and civil rights workers from racial violence. It would make it a federal crime to use violence or threats to interfere with the exercise of civil rights by members of minority groups.

"I'm very hopeful we can pass the bill," he added.

But Mansfield said the measure "is in deep trouble" if Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen opposes its terms. And Dirksen has said he will.

Many postal outlets didn't have enough stamps.

There was a rush for one-cent stamps — needed to bring the mail fee up to par for holders of old five-cent stamps — and a heavy demand for new six-centers.

At Cincinnati, the Fountain Square Post Office sold $14,985 in stamps, compared to a daily average of from $5,000 to $7,000.

The crowd at Springfield's main post office looked like a pre-Christmas rush.

"One firm alone mailed 60,000 letters Saturday (day before the rate change)," said Springfield Postmaster Joe Dennison. "By beating the deadline they saved a total of $600."

The Canton Repository billed Monday's post office business as the city's biggest one-cent sale.

Canton Postmaster Glenn G. Isenman ran low on one-centers and borrowed 120,000 from Alliance.

Youngstown postal authorities told patrons to stop taping pennies to letters alongside five-cent stamps. The coppers are hard on machines which handle mail.

Both Sides Hold Super Bowl Drill

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Now that John Rauch has the weatherman on his side, he's become a clockwatcher.

The Oakland coach is concerned that his Raiders might not have enough time to properly prepare for Sunday's Super Bowl date with the Green Bay Packers.

The Raiders worked for 90 minutes in bright sunshine Thursday, a distinct change from the driving rainstorm they practice in the day before.

"This is more like the kind of weather I expected," said Rauch, enjoying the shirtsleeve climate.

Martin Out; So's Houston

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Losing makes Slater Martin mad, so mad that he wasn't even around to see his Houston team lose Thursday night in the American Basketball League.

The Maverick's coach watched his team sinking until 4:13 was left in their game against Denver at Houston when he got so angry at an official's call, he had two technicals called on him. Finally, the official, Doug Harvey, ejected the enraged coach and he missed the end of Denver's 100-93 victory.

In other games, Pittsburgh stomped Indiana 138-115 for its 18th victory in 19 games, New Orleans trimmed Anaheim 131-124 in overtime, New Jersey hammered Minnesota 110-96 and visiting Kentucky nudged Oakland 110-106.

Junior High Tournament Set Saturday

The Pickaway County Junior High Basketball tournament gets under way 1:30 p. m. Saturday.

Jackson and Washington meet in the first game. The second game of the afternoon card pits Salt Creek and Pickaway.

The evening session Saturday begins at 7 p. m. with Walnut playing Ashville. The final game of the first round finds Scioto and Monroe tangling.

Terry Barthelmas is the tournament manager.

Bill Johnson Joins Bengals

CINCINNATI (AP) — The new Cincinnati Bengals added a fourth assistant to their coaching staff Thursday—Bill Johnson, veteran offensive line coach of the San Francisco 49ers.

Paul Brown, Bengals' coach and general manager who made the announcement, said Johnson will take over the position with the American Football League team Feb. 1.

Johnson served as an assistant coach the last 11 years with the 49ers of the National Football League and played center for them for nine years before he coached.

Circleville Jr. High, Frosh Lose

Both Circleville freshmen and junior high basketball teams were defeated Thursday.

The frosh lost to Lancaster Thomas Ewing, 47-31, while the local seventh and eighth graders lost to the visiting Ewing quintet, 35-26.

Tom Bowers and Rod Kassler scored 12 and ten markers respectively for the Tigers, but the winning ninth grade Ewing quintet was paced by an 18 point effort by Miller.

Ewing had a definite size advantage with several players over six feet. The visitors now have a 7-0 record for the season while the Circleville frosh are 1-5.

CIRCLEVILLE made 11 of 30 field goal attempts for a 31 per cent average. From the foul line the Tigers canned nine of 13, a 62 per cent average and their best charity shooting performance of the year.

The Circleville Junior High team, playing without the services of leading scorer Don Valentine who is recovering from a bout with the flu, made six of 18 shots during the first half and led the visitors by four points. In the second half, however, they slumped to a 19 per cent field goal average making only four of 21, and lost by a nine point margin.

Circleville has been averaging 41 points per game. It was the second loss of the season.

None of the Circleville cagers scored in double figures. Kent Wolfe's eight points was the high effort while Jim Neal chipped in seven, Dave Truex six and Mike Hamrick five.

The next game for both teams is Thursday when they host Lancaster Stansbury in a twin bill.

Rex Kern Proves High Scorer in Classroom

By HAL PARIS
Associated Press Sports Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Rex Kern, one of the most heralded athletes ever to attend Ohio State, has won applause for scoring in the classroom.

The much-publicized frosh star came through his first quarter with a 2.37 scholastic average out of a possible 4.00.

"We were worried his grades might not be good enough because Kern has to hit the books hard," a university official said. "But he has an excellent attitude and worked hard."

Kern is a versatile quarterback who makes Coach Woody Hayes, face light up. Many veteran observers feel that the Lancaster High School product could guide the Buckeyes to a

TVHS Frosh Win 8th Tilt

Teays Valley freshman behind a 21 point scoring effort by Brent Roof rolled to their eighth win of the season, 53-30 over visiting Bishop Ready Frosh Thursday.

The Viking ninth graders are unbeaten this year. Last year the TV frosh squad went through the season undefeated and won all but the final game in the South Suburban League tournament.

In last night's tilt Van Gregg had a 12 point scoring effort, Bob Tucker notched nine, Don Neff seven and Jeff Helsner four.

For Bishop Ready Walter had 17. Tucker was the Vikings' leading rebounder with 12. Dominating the boards, Helsner pulled down 11, Neff and Gregg nine and Roof six.

Teays Valley shot 21 of 45 for a 47 per cent field goal average and made 11 of 21 from the charity line for a 52 per cent mark.

Tuesday the Vikings play at Westfall.

Monroe Fox Drive Slated Saturday

Monroe School and Community Club will sponsor a Fox Drive beginning 9 a. m. Saturday.

Hunters will meet at the Five Points Methodist Church 5 miles east of Mt. Sterling where free coffee will be served. Shot guns only will be permitted. Lunch will be served.

Big Ten championship and a trip to the Rose Bowl.

Kern was an all-state football and basketball performer who also excels in baseball. He's rated the finest natural athlete at Ohio State in more than a decade.

Hayes can't wait to see Kern wear a varsity jersey. He fits the old master's quarterback role to a tee—a hard runner and a fine passer.

Assuming that Kern can keep pace with his studies, the big question is will he also play for Coach Fred Taylor's basketball team.

The last player of note who competed in both sports here was Ralph Armstrong, an end on the 1951-52 football squads and a center on the basketball team.

Kerns, himself, said he's not sure whether he can handle the load.

"I'm going to wait and see. If my grades are good enough, I'd certainly like to take a crack at basketball," Kern said.

The 6-foot, 173-pounder also is an outstanding baseball prospect but several Ohio State athletes have performed in football and baseball without ill effects.

Taylor takes a cautious approach to the situation.

"Sure we'd like to have him because we know he can shoot from the outside and we could use a good-shooting guard. But a lot depends on how things go in the classroom. We'll just have to wait and see."

Kern debunked reports that Hayes wants the young athlete to concentrate only on football.

"Coach Hayes told me that he would like to see me play football and basketball if my grades are good enough. He said one sport would help me in the other."

Kern was sensational in the Bucks' two freshman games last fall. He scored one touchdown on a 77-yard romp and piled up 116 yards in seven carries in a 36-20 victory over tough Pittsburgh.

And he scored two touchdowns and rushed for 73 yards in a 26-7 decision over Indiana.

Which sport would Kern prefer to compete in if he was given the choice?

"I have no favorites," he said. "My real favorite is whichever sport is in season."

Paul Brown, Bengals' coach and general manager who made the announcement, said Johnson will take over the position with the American Football League team Feb. 1.

Johnson served as an assistant coach the last 11 years with the 49ers of the National Football League and played center for them for nine years before he coached.

CHS Cage Tilts Slated in New, Old Gymnasiums

Circleville Jr. High, Frosh Lose

Both Circleville freshmen and junior high basketball teams were defeated Thursday.

The frosh lost to Lancaster Thomas Ewing, 47-31, while the local seventh and eighth graders lost to the visiting Ewing quintet, 35-26.

Tom Bowers and Rod Kassler scored 12 and ten markers respectively for the Tigers, but the winning ninth grade Ewing quintet was paced by an 18 point effort by Miller.

Ewing had a definite size advantage with several players over six feet. The visitors now have a 7-0 record for the season while the Circleville frosh are 1-5.

CIRCLEVILLE made 11 of 30 field goal attempts for a 31 per cent average. From the foul line the Tigers canned nine of 13, a 62 per cent average and their best charity shooting performance of the year.

The Circleville Junior High team, playing without the services of leading scorer Don Valentine who is recovering from a bout with the flu, made six of 18 shots during the first half and led the visitors by four points. In the second half, however, they slumped to a 19 per cent field goal average making only four of 21, and lost by a nine point margin.

Circleville has been averaging 41 points per game. It was the second loss of the season. None of the Circleville cagers scored in double figures. Kent Wolfe's eight points was the high effort while Jim Neal chipped in seven, Dave Truex six and Mike Hamrick five.

The next game for both teams is Thursday when they host Lancaster Stansbury in a twin bill.

Canadiens Top Philadelphia

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Flying Frenchmen finally have hit their stride—and it's Alliez-Oop for Montreal in the National Hockey League chase.

Jean-Claude Tremblay, Yvan Cournoyer and Jacques Lemaire scored Montreal goals less than 3½ minutes apart Thursday night, pacing the Canadiens to a 4-2 triumph over Philadelphia.

Elsewhere Thursday night, second place Boston edged Detroit 5-4 on rookie Derek Sanderson's third period goal to move within two points of the idle Black Hawks in the East and St. Louis played Los Angeles to a 2-2 West Division deadlock.

Rex Kern Proves High Scorer in Classroom

By HAL PARIS
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Rex Kern, one of the most heralded athletes ever to attend Ohio State, has won applause for scoring in the classroom.

The much-publicized frosh star came through his first quarter with a 2.37 scholastic average out of a possible 4.00.

"We were worried his grades might not be good enough because Kern has to hit the books hard," a university official said. "But he has an excellent attitude and worked hard."

Kern is a versatile quarterback who makes Coach Woody Hayes, face light up. Many veteran observers feel that the Lancaster High School product could guide the Buckeyes to a

Big Ten championship and a trip to the Rose Bowl.

Kern was an all-state football and basketball performer who also excels in baseball. He's rated the finest natural athlete at Ohio State in more than a decade.

Hayes can't wait to see Kern wear a varsity jersey. He fits the old master's quarterback role to a tee—a hard runner and a fine passer.

Assuming that Kern can keep pace with his studies, the big question is will he also play for Coach Fred Taylor's basketball team.

The last player of note who competed in both sports here was Ralph Armstrong, an end on the 1951-52 football squads and a center on the basketball team.

Kerns, himself, said he's not sure whether he can handle the load.

"I'm going to wait and see. If my grades are good enough, I'd certainly like to take a crack at basketball," Kern said.

The 6-foot, 173-pounder also is an outstanding baseball prospect but several Ohio State athletes have performed in football and baseball without ill effects.

Taylor takes a cautious approach to the situation.

"Sure we'd like to have him because we know he can shoot from the outside and we could use a good-shooting guard. But a lot depends on how things go in the classroom. We'll just have to wait and see."

Kern debunks reports that Hayes wants the young athlete to concentrate only on football.

"Coach Hayes told me that he would like to see me play football and basketball if my grades are good enough. He said one sport would help me in the other."

Kern was sensational in the Bucks' two freshman games last fall. He scored one touchdown on a 77-yard romp and piled up 116 yards in seven carries in a 36-20 victory over tough Pittsburgh.

And he scored two touchdowns and rushed for 73 yards in a 26-7 decision over Indiana.

Which sport would Kern prefer to compete in if he was given the choice?

"I have no favorites," he said. "My real favorite is whichever sport is in season."

John Pont Moans Loss Of Surprise

NEW YORK (AP) — It's not that John Pont minds having led a team that made him the college football Coach of the Year, you understand, but when he thinks about how the 1968 Indiana team shapes up, he figures the glory could cause a few problems.

"For one thing," Pont said Thursday at the luncheon where the American Football Coaches Association award was announced, "we'll lose the element of surprise. And the team won't have the same character. It'll have a character, but not the same one."

Elaborating on his element-of-surprise theory, Pont, whose team turned around from a 18-1 mark in 1966 to 9-1 during the regular season just completed, pointed to the only blemish on the record—a 33-7 loss to Minnesota.

"Every game before that one," he said, "people were waiting for us to get knocked off and we could prepare ourselves just for the game we were playing."
"But before the Minnesota game, everyone was talking Rose Bowl and there was no way to convince the team I wasn't thinking of it too. Besides that, Minnesota was a good football team."

The annual meeting of members of the Forester Cemetery Association of Circleville, Ohio will be held in the cemetery office on Monday, January 15, 1968 at 7:30 o'clock P. M. for the purpose of electing three trustees and for any other business that may properly come before the meeting.

made the second, and Drake won its 11th game in 13 starts.
It was the other side of the coin for Louisiana State's Maravich, who played most of the second half against Tulane facing disqualification because he had committed four fouls.

But this didn't seem to greatly impair the better-skillet style of the nation's leading major-college scorer. He poured in 52 points as LSU beat Tulane 100-91 then New Orleans to boost its record to 9-3. Maravich has scored 540 points in those 12 games for a 45.8 average.

Father-Son Duo Coach, Play at OU

By HAL PARIS
Associated Press Sports Writer
ATHENS, Ohio (AP)—At Ohio University, the school's basketball brochure describes Coach Jim Snyder as "the type of coach you would like your son to play for."

There's a fine sophomore athlete at the school whose name is Todd Snyder. That's right—he's Jim Snyder's son—and he doesn't play basketball.

Todd concentrates his physical energies on football where he already is acclaimed as one of the outstanding split ends in the Midwest.

The younger Snyder earned eight varsity letters in football, basketball and track while at Athens High School and played well enough to make all-state third team in football and all-state honorable mention in basketball.

So why isn't Todd, who has good speed to go with a 6-foot-2, 185-pound frame, playing basketball for his dad?

"I don't really think he was ever very psyched on basketball—football was always his first love," Coach Snyder said. "Actually, Todd is not real polished for a basketball player."

But the elder Snyder feels that basketball did give his son ability that could be applied in ball, such as better agility and jumping which has helped at his split end spot.

Coach Snyder played football and basketball at Ohio University from 1938-41 and was only the second Bobcat athlete to compete in both.

"It's tough to devote enough time to both sports, one is bound to suffer," Coach Snyder said. "I was always a month behind."

"Besides, Todd has a future in football. It would have been tough for him to play basketball here and it would have been just as tough on me," Snyder admitted.

Todd, a physical education major with pro football aspirations, set two school records last fall. He caught 33 passes good for 629 yards, both new standards.

Ironically, the previous marks went set by Lou Sawchik, who also played basketball for Coach Snyder in 1933.

"There's no question that Todd already is a fine football player," said football Coach Bill Hess. "He has that great coordination and agility to be a fine split end."

Young Snyder has his own views on the subject.

"It's hard to say if I could have played college basketball. But deep down, I kind of think so. I would have to be twice as good as the other players, that's for sure."

"I think if I went to any other school, I might have tried but football still comes a lot easier for me. But I have no regrets at all."

Robertson Kills Celtics

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The fans at Cleveland saw Bill Russell give a big scoring performance and the Boston Celtics put on one of their patented blitzes. They also saw Oscar Robertson doing what he does so well—nullify good scoring performances and blitzes.

Russell scored 34 points, and the Celtics scored 16 straight points in 3 minutes, 18 seconds of the second period for a 19-point lead against Cincinnati Thursday night.

But Robertson scored 40 points including four foul shots in the last nine seconds and the Royals beat Boston 120-116.

In the only NBA game, Zelmos Beaty scored five points and Len Wilkens eight in the last 4½ minutes as the St. Louis Hawks beat the Bullets 108-101 at Baltimore.

scorers with 18 points. Warren Armstrong got 22 for Wichita whose leading scorer Ron Washington fouled out after scoring just nine points.

The St. Louis at Dayton game also was decided by a foul shot. This one was made by Bob Hooper with 20 seconds left for a 57-56 Dayton victory. Don May who tied the game at 56-56 with 3:14 left scored 21 points and tied his own Dayton record of 28 rebounds. Rich Niemann paced St. Louis with 18 points.

None of The Associated Press Top Ten played Thursday night. And only top-ranked UCLA is scheduled to see action tonight against California.

In another Thursday night game Kentucky Wesleyan the

No. 2 small college team lost its second straight game 63-62 to Southern Illinois at Owensboro Ky.

Again it was foul shots that made the difference. Bobby Jackson sank two with 1:07 to play to give the victory. Southern Illinois a former small-college power now listed as a major college.

Home-court victories included Marquette's 71-53 trouncing of Wisconsin Mississippi State's 80-64 drubbing of Delta State and New Mexico State's 81-71 defeat of Southern Colorado.

Virginia edged Clemson 95-92. Virginia Tech topped Richmond 80-71. Rhode Island walloped Northeastern 81-66 and San Jose State downed St. Mary's Calif. 76-69.

"I don't really think he was ever very psyched on basketball—football was always his first love," Coach Snyder said. "Actually, Todd is not real polished for a basketball player."

But the elder Snyder feels that basketball did give his son ability that could be applied in ball, such as better agility and jumping which has helped at his split end spot.

Coach Snyder played football and basketball at Ohio University from 1938-41 and was only the second Bobcat athlete to compete in both.

"It's tough to devote enough time to both sports, one is bound to suffer," Coach Snyder said. "I was always a month behind."

"Besides, Todd has a future in football. It would have been tough for him to play basketball here and it would have been just as tough on me," Snyder admitted.

Todd, a physical education major with pro football aspirations, set two school records last fall. He caught 33 passes good for 629 yards, both new standards.

Ironically, the previous marks went set by Lou Savchik, who also played basketball for Coach Snyder in 1953.

"There's no question that Todd already is a fine football player," said football Coach Bill Hess. "He has that great coordination and agility to be a fine split end."

Young Snyder has his own views on the subject.
"It's hard to say if I could have played college basketball. But deep down, I kind of think so. I would have to be twice as good as the other players, that's for sure."

"I think if I went to any other school, I might have tried but football still comes a lot easier for me. But I have no regrets at all."

Robertson Kills Celtics

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The fans at Cleveland saw Bill Russell give a big scoring performance and the Boston Celtics put on one of their patented blitzes. They also saw Oscar Robertson doing what he does so well—nullify good scoring performances and blitzes.
Russell scored 34 points, and the Celtics scored 16 straight points in 3 minutes, 18 seconds of the second period for a 19-point lead against Cincinnati Thursday night.

But Robertson scored 40 points including four foul shots in the last nine seconds and the Royals beat Boston 120-116.
In the only other NBA game, Zelmor Beatty scored five points and Len Wilkens eight in the last 4½ minutes as the St. Louis Hawks beat the Bulls 108-101 at Baltimore.

Buses Travel 425 Miles Daily Carrying 900 Pupils

By FRITZ F. JACOBS
City School Superintendent

The transportation system of the Circleville City Schools, although not large by comparison, transport 821 public and 85 non public school students daily.

Seven regular buses are utilized for the daily routes traveling from 31 to 85 miles each. The total daily miles for the seven buses is approximately 425 miles.

To be eligible for transportation a student must reside more than one mile from the elementary school of attendance, measured to the street area in front of the nearest entrance and one and one-half miles from the junior or senior high school measured to the intersection of Clark Drive and the front drive of the high school and to the nearest entrance of the junior high school at the street. Obviously this distance factor creates some problems and criticism especially from those living just inside the limits but equally obvious is the fact that a cutoff point must exist by some standards and no matter what criteria is utilized some objections will exist. State law requires that students living more than two miles from an elementary school be transported and does not require transportation for high school students.

Multiple routing is used in the transportation schedule with secondary students being transported first in the morning and last in the afternoon. This plan does not require younger children to be transported in other than daylight hours and requires fewer buses than a plan bringing all students to school at the same time. It also separates extreme age groups riding at the same time.

Of the total number of students transported, 550 are junior high, 85 are parochial and 271 are elementary. Fewer elementary are transported as most students live within one mile of their attendance center.

The cost of an average year for transportation will be between $22,000 and $24,000 exclusive of any bus purchase.

When buses are needed for replacement they exceed $7,600 per bus. The original cost is only the beginning as gasoline and oil, repair, insurance and tires require a sizeable amount each year.

A most important part of the transportation is the school bus driver. He or she is entrusted with a great responsibility and must meet many requirements.

Pupils and parents also have responsibilities for cooperating with all concerned for an efficient operation. Some of these responsibilities are as follows:

1. Parents and pupils must assume that school bus transportation is a privilege to the student, not a right.
2. Pupils will ride on assigned buses. Parents must request in writing to permit deviation from this rule. Requests shall be made to the administration.
3. Pupils will ride their assigned bus both to and from home to school unless a written request asking permission to be let off bus at some other stop is presented to bus driver and signed by parents. Parents will assume the responsibility of child when such a request is made and granted.
4. Parents are responsible for the safety of pupils while going to and from pick-up points and for their meeting the bus on schedule.

5. Buses operate on a time schedule as outlined by the transportation administrator.

6. Parents will be responsible for any damage to a bus by their children.

7. Eating and littering are not permitted on buses.

8. Noise on a bus shall be kept to a minimum at all times to assure safety of operation.

9. Absolute quiet must be maintained at railroad crossings or other danger areas.

10. Nothing shall be thrown out of the bus nor anything held so it extends out of the window.

11. All parts of pupils' bodies shall be kept inside the school bus at all times.

12. Pupils shall be waiting at the curb side of the road to board the bus when it stops in the morning.

13. Pupils shall sit three to a seat and no standers shall be allowed as long as seats are available. Seats may be assigned by driver to maintain order and for evacuation purposes.

14. The driver has the authority to enforce the above regulations. The pupils shall conduct themselves on the school bus as they would in a classroom except that reasonable visiting and conversation are permissible. Continued disorderly conduct or refusal to submit to the authority of the driver shall be sufficient reason for refusing transportation service to any pupil. When it becomes necessary to refuse a pupil transportation due to misconduct, the school administration shall notify the parents of such refusal with a full explanation for this action. The bus driver then shall not permit the pupil to board the bus at his or her home until the parent gives assurance of future good conduct on the part of the pupil.

It is the intent of the Pupil Transportation Policies to assure pupils and parents a safe, dependable, and efficient program. Rules are necessary to govern the operation of such a program, and it is not the intent of the Board of Education to assume an unreasonable approach to this phase of the school program.

It is not suggested that these policies are all-inclusive or ideal or that they meet all the needs of all districts. They are presented as essential statements for providing safe, economical, and adequate service. They are given to illustrate the types of decisions, on policy, that boards of education must make to provide a reasonable quality of service in a district with average climate, topographical and traffic conditions.

Cassini Unveils Low-Priced Line

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
AP Fashion Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Up to now the only daddies who could afford to keep the swinging young things in style have been the sugar daddies.

One of the paradoxes today is that the only women who can really do justice to the thinny minifashions are the young who tend to be slim of purse, as well slim figuratively.

And high styles—hemlines and otherwise—tend to be highly expensive.

While not many American designers seem to be defending the woman with wide girth and small purse, Oleg Cassini did frug to the microphone Thursday to defend the beautiful but impoverished young.

His program of low priced high style was a part of the American Designer series, a weeklong preview of spring collections.

Nothing was as elegant or understated as the gowns made for Mrs. John F. Kennedy when Cassini was her official White House couturier. But nothing carried the Kennedy kind of a price in the new young collection.

Cassini was so happy about the matter that every now and then he raced to the runway to writhe to the rock music with a pretty young model.

By contrast in price the earlier program featured Christian Dior of New York with quietly pretty clothes that cost a pretty penny.

Bowles Ends 'Cordial Talks' With Sihanouk

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Chester Bowles ended his visit to Cambodia today as the Soviet Union moved rapidly to oppose any agreement he and Prince Norodom Sihanouk might have reached to restrict the use of Cambodian territory by the Vietnamese Communists.

Bowles, sent to Phnom Penh by President Johnson, told newsmen as he left for New Delhi that he was "very satisfied with the successful talks."

It was believed in Phnom Penh that Sihanouk agreed for the three-nation International Control Commission to keep a closer watch on the border between Cambodia and South Vietnam. But Cambodian sources reported that Soviet Ambassador Sergei Kouznetsov and Myiicki, the head of the Polish delegation to the ICC, had called on Sihanouk to express their opposition to a U.S. offer of two helicopters to assist the commission in border watching.

The two Communist representatives said their governments opposed the offer because the United States did not sign the 1954 Geneva agreements which got the French out of Indochina and set up the control commission.

N.J. Transit Crash Injures 200

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — A New York-bound rapid transit commuter train crashed into the rear of another at the height of the evening rush hour Thursday injuring some 200 persons. Eighteen required hospitalization.

There were no fatalities. The injured began jamming the Jersey City Medical Center shortly after the 5:15 p.m. collision which occurred just west of the Port Authority Trans Hudson (PATH) tubes station at Journal Square here.

Twenty-eight doctors were called in to reinforce the two normally assigned to emergency duty. Dr. Clifford Blasi, director of emergency facilities, said more than 200 victims were brought in. Most were treated and released.

Probate Court Issues Report Of Adoption

Pickaway County Probate Court has issued its annual report on children for whom adoption petitions were granted during the year 1967.

The total number of children involved was 49, an increase of 26 over the previous year. Of the total number, two were legitimizations and three changes of name.

The report states that the adoptions granted resulting from agency placements numbered 21. No placements were made for 28 of the children.

Records show that adoption petitions were made by relatives of the child in 28 cases; not related 21.

Whereas only two children had been adopted through agency placements in 1966, an agency was responsible for 21 of the adoptions of the past year.

"I heard a big sound and then everything went black," said Gilbert Rodriguez, 46, of the Bronx, N.Y., a passenger in one of the trains. Rodriguez said he was in a train which halted behind a second of the subway-style trains, waiting to enter the Journal Square station.

A third train collided with the rear of the one he was on, Rodriguez said. He added the impact knocked him unconscious and when he awoke "many people were on the floor, all yelling."

He was taken to the hospital with back and neck injuries. Jersey City Police Director George Whelan declared a state of emergency and police, Red Cross, fire and civil defense units swarmed into the area to evacuate injured.

Rescue operations were hampered because of the near-zero weather, and the locations of the trains in an open gully, or cut, just west of the station. Firemen used ladders to climb down the steep, ice-covered walls, of the gully.

Many of the injured were helped from the gully to a department store built on concrete pilings over the tracks. There, employees comforted them until they could be rushed to the hospital by one of the scores of ambulances which almost eliminated other traffic in the downtown area.

A path spokesman said only two trains were involved in the collision.

However, some of the passengers—including Rodriguez—claimed they were in a train that had been sideswiped by a second train and rammed by a third.

The path spokesman could offer no immediate reason for the collision.

The accident halted service on the line, which hauls some 100,000 passengers a day between New York City and New Jersey points. Commuters who normally rid the electric cars to connect with other trains and buses at Jersey City, Newark and Hoboken, were forced to wait, or to find alternate routes until service resumed at 8:30 p.m.

Report on City Schools

Buses Travel 425 Miles Daily Carrying 900 Pupils

By FRITZ F. JACOBS
City School Superintendent

The transportation system of the Circleville City Schools, although not large by comparison, transport 821 public and 85 non public school students daily.

Seven regular buses are utilized for the daily routes traveling from 31 to 85 miles each. The total daily miles for the seven buses is approximately 425 miles.

To be eligible for transportation a student must reside more than one mile from the elementary school of attendance, measured to the street area in front of the nearest entrance and one and one-half miles from the junior or senior high school measured to the intersection of Clark Drive and the front drive of the high school and to the nearest entrance of the junior high school at the street. Obviously this distance factor creates some problems and criticism especially from those living just inside the limits but equally obvious is the fact that a cutoff point must exist by some standards and no matter what criteria is utilized some objections will exist. State law requires that students living more than two miles from an elementary school be transported and does not require transportation for high school students.

Multiple routing is used in the transportation schedule with secondary students being transported first in the morning and last in the afternoon. This plan does not require younger children to be transported in other than daylight hours and requires fewer buses than a plan bringing all students to school at the same time. It also separates extreme age groups riding at the same time.

Of the total number of students transported, 550 are junior high, 85 are parochial and 271 are elementary. Fewer elementary are transported as most students live within one mile of their attendance center. The cost of an average year for transportation will be between $22,000 and $24,000 exclusive of any bus purchase.

When buses are needed for replacement they exceed $7,000 per bus. The original cost is only the beginning as gasoline and oil, repair, insurance and tires require a sizeable amount each year.

A most important part of the transportation is the school bus driver. He or she is entrusted with a great responsibility and must meet many requirements. Pupils and parents also have responsibilities for cooperating with all concerned for an efficient operation. Some of these responsibilities are as follows:

1. Parents and pupils must assume that school bus transportation is a privilege to the student, not a right.
2. Pupils will ride on assigned buses. Parents must request in writing to permit deviation from this rule. Requests shall be made to the administration.
3. Pupils will ride their assigned bus both to and from home to school unless a written request asking permission to be let off bus at some other stop is presented to bus driver and signed by parents. Parents will assume the responsibility of child when such a request is made and granted.
4. Parents are responsible for the safety of pupils while going to and from pick-up points and for their meeting the bus on schedule.

5. Buses operate on a time schedule as outlined by the transportation administrator.

6. Parents will be responsible for any damage to a bus by their children.

7. Eating and littering are not permitted on buses.

8. Noise on a bus shall be kept to a minimum at all times to assure safety of operation.

9. Absolute quiet must be maintained at railroad crossings or other danger areas.

10. Nothing shall be thrown out of the bus nor anything held so it extends out of the window.

11. All parts of pupils' bodies shall be kept inside the school bus at all times.

12. Pupils shall be waiting at the curb side of the road to board the bus when it stops in the morning.

13. Pupils shall sit three to a seat and no standers shall be allowed as long as seats are available. Seats may be assigned by driver to maintain order and for evacuation purposes.

14. The driver has the authority to enforce the above regulations. The pupils shall conduct themselves on the school bus as they would in a classroom except that reasonable visiting and conversation are permissible. Continued disorderly conduct or refusal to submit to the authority of the driver shall be sufficient reason for refusing transportation service to any pupil. When it becomes necessary to refuse a pupil transportation due to misconduct, the school administration shall notify the parents of such refusal with a full explanation for this action. The bus driver then shall not permit the pupil to board the bus at his or her home until the parent gives assurance of future good conduct on the part of the pupil.

It is the intent of the Pupil Transportation Policies to assure pupils and parents a safe, dependable, and efficient program. Rules are necessary to govern the operation of such a program, and it is not the intent of the Board of Education to assume an unreasonable approach to this phase of the school program.

It is not suggested that these policies are all-inclusive or ideal or that they meet all the needs of all districts. They are presented as essential statements for providing safe, economical, and adequate service. They are given to illustrate the types of decisions, on policy, that boards of education must make to provide a reasonable quality of service in a district with average climate, topographical and traffic conditions.

Cassini Unveils Low-Priced Line

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON
AP Fashion Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Up to now the only daddies who could afford to keep the swinging young things in style have been the sugar daddies.

One of the paradoxes today is that the only women who can really do justice to the thinny minifashions are the young who tend to be slim of purse, as well slim figuratively.

And high styles—hemlines and otherwise—tend to be highly expensive.

While not many American designers seem to be defending the woman with wide girth and small purse, Oleg Cassini did frug to the microphone Thursday to defend the beautiful but impoverished young.

His program of low priced high style was a part of the American Designer series, a weeklong preview of spring collections.

Nothing was as elegant or understated as the gowns made for Mrs. John F. Kennedy when Cassini was her official White House couturier. But nothing carried the Kennedy kind of a price in the new young collection.

Cassini was so happy about the matter that every now and then he raced to the runway to write to the rock music with a pretty young model.

By contrast in price the earlier program featured Christian Dior of New York with quietly pretty clothes that cost a pretty penny.

Bowles Ends 'Cordial Talks' With Sihanouk

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Chester Bowles ended his visit to Cambodia today as the Soviet Union moved rapidly to oppose any agreement he and Prince Norodom Sihanouk might have reached to restrict the use of Cambodian territory by the Vietnamese Communists.

Bowles, sent to Phnom Penh by President Johnson, told newsmen as he left for New Delhi that he was "very satisfied with the successful talks."

It was believed in Phnom Penh that Sihanouk agreed for the three-nation International Control Commission to keep a closer watch on the border between Cambodia and South Vietnam. But Cambodian sources reported that Soviet Ambassador Sergei Kouznetsov and Myicki, the head of the Polish delegation to the ICC, had called on Sihanouk to express their opposition to a U.S. offer of two helicopters to assist the commission in border watching.

The two Communist representatives said their governments opposed the offer because the United States did not sign the 1954 Geneva agreements which got the French out of Indochina and set up the control commission.

N.J. Transit Crash Injures 200

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — A New York-bound rapid transit commuter train crashed into the rear of another at the height of the evening rush hour Thursday injuring some 200 persons. Eighteen required hospitalization.

There were no fatalities. The injured began jamming the Jersey City Medical Center shortly after the 5:15 p.m. collision which occurred just west of the Port Authority Trans Hudson (PATH) tubes station at Journal Square here.

Twenty-eight doctors were called in to reinforce the two normally assigned to emergency duty. Dr. Clifford Blasi, director of emergency facilities, said more than 200 victims were brought in. Most were treated and released.

Probate Court Issues Report Of Adoption

Pickaway County Probate Court has issued its annual report on children for whom adoption petitions were granted during the year 1967.

The total number of children involved was 49, an increase of 26 over the previous year. Of the total number, two were legitimizations and three changes of name.

The report states that the adoptions granted resulting from agency placements numbered 21. No placements were made for 28 of the children. Records show that adoption petitions were made by relatives of the child in 23 cases; not related 21.

Whereas only two children had been adopted through agency placements in 1966, an agency was responsible for 21 of the adoptions of the past year.

"I heard a big sound and then everything went black," said Gilbert Rodriguez, 46, of the Bronx, N.Y., a passenger in one of the trains. Rodriguez said he was in a train which halted behind a second of the subway-style trains, waiting to enter the Journal Square station.

A third train collided with the rear of the one he was on, Rodriguez said. He added the impact knocked him unconscious and when he awoke "many people were on the floor, all yelling."

He was taken to the hospital with back and neck injuries. Jersey City Police Director George Whelan declared a state of emergency and police, Red Cross, fire and civil defense units swarmed into the area to evacuate injured.

Rescue operations were hampered because of the near-zero weather, and the locations of the trains in an open gully, or cut, just west of the station. Firemen used ladders to climb down the steep, ice-covered walls, of the gully.

Many of the injured were helped from the gully to a department store built on concrete pilings over the tracks. There, employees comforted them until they could be rushed to the hospital by one of the scores of ambulances which almost eliminated other traffic in the downtown area.

A path spokesman said only two trains were involved in the collision.

However, some of the passengers—including Rodriguez—claimed they were in a train that had been sideswiped by a second train and rammed by a third.

The path spokesman could of-

The accident halted service on the line, which hauls some 100,000 passengers a day between New York City and New Jersey points. Commuters who
